of it, while Mr. Fulford added, "I don't give these figures to glorify the business, you will understand, but to enable you to make the facts tangible to an ordinary reader."

"Does Great Britain do its charge in the business." "Does Great Britain do its share in the business: asked the reporter.

''Yes I think we have had a record there.
The head of a leading advertising agency in Londou to whom I showed my figures told me

then?"

"I cannot attribute it in reasonable logic to anything but the merits of the pills. For, consider, in France, which I have just been opening up, it costs in adventising somewhere between thirty-five and torty francs to sell every 3½ franc box of pills—first sales that is. Now, it is obvious that if all our sales were first sales, that is sales direct from the advertisements, we should be losing from six to ten dollars on every box sold. It is because the people who have used Pink Pills once use them again, and recommend them to others, that we begin to see daylight there; and the case is the same the world over."

"But your advertising has been very extensive?"

"Oh, certainly. But exactly for that reason we would never afford to do it if we had to depend on first sales alone. It is the sales on recommendation of those who use the pills that pay, and if the recommendation were not there it would be bankrupt in a very short time. All the same, the advertising is a big item, and I consider the Pink Pill business a public education came in.

The reporter wanted to know where the education came in.

"Through the press. The newspaper press is the greatest educative influence of the day. Where do you suppose the culture of Brockville would be without the RECORDER? Now, it's not the two cents a copy that pays for all the interesting and valuable matter that is gathered from the ends of the earth in a newspaper; it is the advertisements that pay the biggest part of the bill for news and literary matter. I suppose I have spent about held.
