Rise up ye Women that are at Ease

CHRISTENDOM AND THE LIQUOR CRIME.
By Bishop Randolph S. Foster, D. D., LL. D.

The vicious classes are Christian born. Think for a moment, that this Christendom has authorized by law and sanction of the state, the creation of this frightful pest; that it has provided for its creation; that it is here not in opposition to, but of her will, that by formal and deliberate legislation, brought about by Christian votes, she has opened, in all her towns and cities, slaughter houses of men, women and children, and of all virtue, and employs a million minions to do this dreadful work; that she has done this and continues to do it with her eyes open, and with full knowledge and purpose; that she has prepared and planned and deliberated in government chambers, for the production of these desperate classes; that her employed and licensed minions do this for pay.

For a generation Christendom has been hearing a low growl from the kennel, where she is battenning these wild beasts of passions; a growl in the kennel as they have crunched their victims. "What means the roar today along Trafalgar Square and London streets?" It is the beast, loose, and shaking his mane. Pamper him a little more on Government joints, and no kennel-dog will hold him. Fitted for roven, he will raven to the full. Run engenders poverty; poverty and run engender crime. From the Government run-shop, the wild beast hunts his prey. Is Christendom struck with judicial blindness, that she sleeps? Are her eyes holden, that she cannot see? There are armies marching and counter-marching, with banners on which are emblazoned dynamite, anarchism, communism, nihilism, labor league, no Sablath, down with the Church and State, recruited from the dram-shop and offered from the kennel. Are we so dead that we do not hear the tramp of the gathering legions? Nations that license murder for pay will be murdered for plunder; nations that batten the wild beast of passion will be devoured by the wild beasts of rapine and ruin. The rum hole must be closed, or the rum hell will engulf Christendom. What shall be done with Christian rum in the problem. What shall become of the Christian world? Answer it with license, or authorization, or tempering policies, is it difficult to see the end? Strike it down, cage the beasts that vend the frenzy in the only place to which they belong, the criminal cell and the kennel will disperse. There is but one remedy. We have had experience enough to have learned what that is. The nations must put an end to transforming men into beasts by law, and must put the beasts who do it into a limbo where their sorceries will cease. The conflict is now upon us. It is a life-and-death struggle. The Government is on the side of the beasts; the people make the Government. Shall the rum fiend still carry on his carnival of death? Shall the rum minions, at the still, behind the bar, at the bar, in the gutter, or in the mansion, rule? Or is there enough of manhood among us to save Christendom from the damning shame. The answer we make to that question determines fate. If Christianity has not power to save Christendom, where is our hope? With what face, then, can we go to the heathen? There is no devil-worshipper in Africa more degraded, more lost to all sense of shame than the demon worshipper of rum; no high priest of the sorceries of heathenism more disabized than the minions of Christian states authorized to manufacture and vend the poison. Paganism can muster no miscreants from all her realms more debased than the rum army; no festering pest house—not even the Chinese opium den—more deadly to virtue than the Christian rum-hole. Must it be endured longer? Must the race be doomed to go into the future with this mill stone fastened about its neck by legislators of Christian states? Are our tyrants too much for us? Then farewell to hope.

Who doubts that there is a remedy for this state of things? It is not unknown. The evil is rampant, not of necessity, but because we have not the courage or the desire to apply the remedy. It is simply needed that right-minded people combine to do the work; and in this as in every case of a crying evil the Church must lead in the reform. This is her most peculiar province. It comes in the line of the great class of moral issues of which she is the recognized guardian.

It cannot be effected by moral suasion, by sermons, by prayers or by abstinence of the well-disposed. It is a case where the arm of the law and force repressive is the only resort. It belongs to the department of crimes; and must of necessity, be met by criminal law faithfully executed. The rum seller is a criminal and must be held amenable to criminal law.

The traffic must cease to be treated as a question of rights and liberty of individual choice, as the pursuit of a legitimate calling, as much so as theft, or murder, or any other crime. It belongs to the same category, and nothing but sophistry can give it any other place. The rum seller is an unmitigated enemy of society, dangerous to public welfare; there is no criminal of deeper dye. He has been petted by the state; respectability has been thrown around his most atrocious crime; he has been protected in it by law, has been authorized by money license to practice it. He has been permitted to live among us as a free, respected citizen, pursuing a legitimate calling; to hold up his head and walk the streets as the equal of respectable men; has become the boon companion of law-makers; permitted to appear in court and sit on juries as a virtuous citizen. He has been allowed to open his doors upon the public streets, and drive his business in open day, the peer of honorable tradesmen. So long as this remains his business will flourish. There is no moral power that can reach him. He will continue to be defiant and grow more contemptuous of decency every day.

There is but one road of deliverance from this pestiferous evil. It is not obscure; it is the plain, straightforward road of simple honesty in dealing with a case of pronounced crime. The rum-seller is a criminal pure and simple; he must be treated as such in law and administration. The brand of felon must be put upon his brow; and he must be made to take his place in the felon's dock, and in the felon's cell, or on his gibbet. This kind of speech is not out of fashion. This is the position the Christian Church must assume, and to which the Christian states must be forced by right-minded people. It must be made impossible for legislators and courts and the police set for public protection to be complicated with crime. A felon class has grown up among us. The felony is clear, pronounced, the most dreadful. They are robbers and despoilers of innocence. Their business is murderous. It has no other quality in it. It threatens our homes. It fills our jails and prisons and pauper asylums. It fills many of our homes with miseries worse than death. It is a felony of the deepest dye, pure and simple. The felon's dock, the felon's cell, and if need be the felon's gibbet, is the only remedy for such a crime.

A statement must be vocalized into organic expression which will compel legislation. The sentiment exists. It must be expressed in the only effectual way, until a rum-seller will no more dare to open his house of death among us than would a dealer in deadly pestilence; until he must like other miscreants—of which there are none greater—hide himself in the dens and caverns of night from the vengeance of hot pursuit. Brand felon on his brow; huddle him with co-fellows in the criminal's dock; drive him with the gang in striped garments. The business will then cease, and the earth will be delivered from his devilish sorceries. * * * Treat the criminal as he deserves; let criminal law do its function; put him in the criminal dock, which is the only place to which he is entitled; carry him from the dock, by sentence of law, to the felon's cell or to the gallows; strip himself of his property, who are his only fit associates. Let the process be the most summary possible; let the law take hold of the factor on simple evidence of his business; put it under ban of right of search when its presence is suspected. Deal with it precisely as we deal with theft, murder, abduction, and classes of a crime which grade with it, but are far below it in atrocity. In a nation whose legislation is controlled by universal suffrage and direct vote, if half the voters have not sunk below the level of men, it cannot be long until we are delivered of this insufferable shame.

A Shrewd Photographer.
A Fifth Avenue photographer has lately completed a system by which his pictures of babies have become famous. He has discarded all the familiar expedients of his profession to persuade very young children to submit to the camera and his scheme has been completely successful. One part of his gallery has been fitted up like a nursery. Around the room at convenient points are situated cameras and these are in charge of his assistants. The photographer devotes his attention to the baby. He tries all the toys in turns, gets on as intimate terms as possible with the baby after such short acquaintance and gradually lures the unsuspecting infant into looking his best. When pose and expression are satisfactory, he gives a signal to one of his assistants at the camera and the trick is done. Mothers bring their babies from all quarters to this tactful photographer. It would be a difficult matter to find any child who would not, after ten minutes' session with toys, exhibit some expression that his parents would be proud of. The artist catches that expression and as many other agreeable ones as possible. The final delight comes to the mother when she receives the proofs, not sent as proofs usually are, but mounted on a large piece of card board which makes it possible to compare them simultaneously. The wise man has left nothing undone which could strengthen his hold on the babies and their photographs.—New York Sun.

Here is a patent process for restoring to cracked earthenware its water tight properties. Make a paste with finely sifted wood ash and emery powder, moistening it with the white of an egg; rub this over the crack on the outside and let it dry in the open air.

"Why," exclaimed one Spanish statesman "will you insist on borrowing trouble?"

"Well," replied the other, "that seems to be the only thing we can negotiate for just now."
