Dont's For Writers.

Dont tell the editor that he may fix up your manuscript to suit himself, it is your business to fix it up to suit him.

Dont prepare your manuscript carelessly, writing with pencil on odd sheets of paper, folding it crisscross and jamming it into too small an envelope. If you care no more than that for your work, how do you expect any one else to value it?

Dont say of a story: "This tale is based on actual experience." Every story worth reading is true to life though every word of it may be "made up."

"Are your characters real ones?" I once asked a famous and beloved story-teller. "Not one, I am happy to say; not one," he answered forcibly. Yet every one of them lived in her readers' imaginations, and might have lived on the earth.

Dont write poetry—at least, dont send poetry to editors—until you know what poetry is. You can learn this only by the wide reading and deep appreciation of the very best poets; to name only a few, Browning, Tennyson, Wordsworth, Shelley, Spenser, Milton, Shakespeare, Chaucer. And dont write for any subject unless you have something new to say, or something old that you can say in a new way.

Dont send a manuscript to an editor before studying his periodical. Would a commercial traveler try to sell groceries to a jeweler? Yet authors are constantly making this grotesque mistake.

Dont send out your first story, or your second, or your tenth. Storywriting is a difficult art. Would a young cook expect to sell her first pie—or eat it, for that matter? Practice, practice, practice! And lay aside your efforts, till you can see how crude they are.

And finally,—though I have much more to say,—if you feel moved to write, write! It is a blessed form of self-expression. Dont give up, if you cannot all at once express yourself fully or move others, Rome was not built in a day—nor was "In Memoriam."

St. Thomas and Dante on St. Paul's Definition of Faith

I have often heard it said, and have seen it in print, that Dante's "Divina Commedia" is St. Thomas's "Summa Theologica" in verse, writes Rev. William A. Sutton, S. J., in the Irish Ecclesiastical Record. Speaking once to an eminent literary professor and happening to mention this, he observed, "I have said so myself." "Well," I replied, if it were so, one would expect that both would interpret similarly St. Paul's definition of faith. He quite agreed. "Both are, of course, profound and true," I answered, "yet like the poles asunder. Take the words, substance of things to be hoped for. Dante explains substance as foundation; St. Thomas as the key to God's treasure store just as the principles of any science give the key to all the treasures of knowledge looked up therein. They interpret proof, too, quite differently."

This was not the only occasion when the above assertion surprised those who took it for granted, that what many lovers of St. Thomas and Dante said must be true, and it was suggested that the matter would form a very interesting subject for a magazine article.

St. Thomas says—

Substance is commonly said to be the first beginning of anything, and especially when the whole of what follows is contained virtually in the first principle, for example, if we were to say that the assumed first principles are the substance of a science, because the first thing, appearing to the science in use comes out when he "interviewed" these principles, and in them the whole science is virtually contained.

In this way, therefore, faith is said to be the substance of things hoped for, because the first beginning of these in us is by the assent of faith, which virtually contains all things hoped for; because we hope to be made happy by seeing clearly what we now assent to by faith, as is evident from what has been said above about felicity (1-2q. 3 art. 8 and q. 4 art. 3). But the relation of the act of faith to the object of the intellect, is expressed in what is said by the words, the argument of what appears not, argument is taken for its effect; for by argument the intellect is brought to assent to what is true; therefore, here the firm adhesion of the mind to the unseen truth of faith is called argument; whence another reading has conviction (Augustine tract. 79 in Joann.), because by the divine authority the mind of the believer is made certain in assenting to what he does not see.

Ambition.

Ambition is the spark plug that ignites the oil of effort. No man ever succeeded without ambition and some have failed because of it.

Be ambitious, but don't be too lazy in that ambition. Focus ambition and it will turn defeat into victory. The man who vaguely imagines that he wants to succeed—to own a business, to be rich, to get on—will never find the fabled Castle of Achievement.

Men who travel, if they wish to reach a destination, know in advance where they are going. We live in a practical world; we aim to eliminate waste and lost motion; we want results—quick! Therefore, know where we are going.

Brutus was ambitious, but his ambition was not tempered by a desire to serve and benefit. Brutus was the original Wallingford. He wanted to get rich quick, to become Caesar overnight. Brutus' ambition led downward.

If a man would grow big in life, let him never lose his ambition. When one goal is reached, let him marshal all his armies and resources to win again on the morrow. Be up and doing! Never let the sun go down at night with your ambition dead and your ardor cooled.

Men who are ambitious never grow old, for they have found Ponce de Leon's magic fountain. Ambition leads men on and on, through every adversity. When success has crowned our efforts, we find that ambition has taken wings again and on the morrow we break camp to follow.

Ambition has built cities, tilled the fields, populated the waste places, drained swamps and dug graves.

Ambition is the child of Eternity, Eternity is the distance between Sunrise and Sunset. We are in the Now, we are fighting for our ambition—and we are winning! There is no other way to win.

Ambition is power.

The Seven Wise Men.

Most people have heard of the Seven Wise Men of Greece, Pittacus, Bias, Solon, Thales, Chilon, Cleobus and Periander. Here is their story; and the moral of it is worth remembering, if the names are not. As some Coans were fishing, certain strangers from Miletus bought whatever should be in the nets without seeing it. When the nets were brought in they were found to contain a golden tripod. A dispute arose among the fishermen and the strangers as to whom it belonged; and as they could not agree, they took it to the Temple of Apollo and consulted the priestess there. She said it must be given to the wisest man in Greece; and it was accordingly sent to Bias, who declared that Thales was wiser, and sent it to another one, and so on until it passed through the hands of all the men, distinguished afterward as the seven Wise Men; and as each one claimed that the other was wiser than he, it was finally sent to the Temple of Apollo, where it long remained to teach the lesson that the wisest are the most distrustful of their wisdom.

Had Pimples and Festering Sores ON HER FACE.

When the blood gets bad, boils, pimples and festering sores are sure to break out on the face and body. To get rid of them the blood should be cleansed by Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mrs. Charles Jewell, Orville, Ont., writes: "I feel it my duty to write and tell you about what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I was so pale I had no color at all. I also had pimples and festering sores on my face, and my head ached nearly all the time. I had been reading in the paper, and saw that Burdock Blood Bitters was good for such troubles so I took a bottle and before it was half done I felt new, and when the bottle was finished I felt like a new woman. I tell all my friends about it, and advise everyone suffering from such trouble to use B.B.B."

There is only one B.B.B. That is the genuine, manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
