

Blood Poisoning

SO INSIDIOUSLY does blood-poisoning develop that we never know when to expect serious trouble from a mere scratch or simple wound. By promptly cleansing the injured part and applying Dr. Chase's Ointment you can be sure that the wound is thoroughly antiseptic, and that no poisonous germ can live to cause serious development.

Mr. Torger Olson, Melvor, Sask., writes:—"Last fall I got a sore on my finger in thrashing, and it must have got poison in it. I went to the doctor twice, and he gave me different medicines to use, but they didn't help. The sore grew worse all the time, until it spread away up over the shoulder. It eventually was a hideous arm. Finally, I read of Dr. Chase's Ointment in your Almanac, so I got a box, and I had only applied it twice when I felt relief. I used this box and got another, and the two boxes cured me."

The healing qualities of Dr. Chase's Ointment are proven by its phenomenal success as a cure for eczema, salt rheum and other forms of skin disease which defy all ordinary treatments.

Duty.

When the Budget is read in the Parliament House And the eloquent ministers there expound to a listening open-eyed (?) crowd Of the Exchequer's need of repair; When brains, in a labyrinth lost for an hour, Grow dizzy with figures that stun, That's the time when a measure of duty is sprung. Not a bit like the duty you wrought Soldier man, Not a bit like the duty you've done.

But it is of the kind That counts most, do you mind, So the men at the counting house say: The duty you've done in the teeth of the foe Does not count at the Customs to-day, Not down in your pockets and pay.

When ye crouched in the trench for the fiend command, When ye yelled on the wrecked barricade, When over the plain swept the red hurricane And you led in the deadliest raid; In that hour of blood when ye rushed thro' the wood, Tho' the Boches were there two to one, When the hot breath of hell from the batteries fell, There a full share of duty you've done, Soldier man, There a full share of duty you've done.

But what worth is it now What you did anyhow? What e'er the despatches may say, The duty you've done in the teeth of the foe Does not count at the Customs to-day, Not down in your pockets and pay.

Veteran of Four Wars

BURIED WITH MILITARY HONORS AT HOLYROOD YESTERDAY.

Far from the sound of bursting shells and all that is great and horrible on the battle scarred fields of France and Flanders, there passed to the Great Beyond at the peaceful little village of Holyrood, on Friday last a veteran of four wars in the person of the late Staff-Sergeant Patrick E. Timmons, of the Canadian Overseas Royal Construction Corps and of the Princess Patricia's Light Infantry. Few men, if any, in this country have had such a varied experience of wars and world-wide travel as the late Patrick Timmons. From his early childhood days he was of a mind to roam and with that desire to see the things of the world he left his home when but a mere lad, not quite fifteen years of age. After varied experiences in other lands he happened to be in the United States in the year 1898 when that country declared war on the Spaniards. Enlisting with a New York Regiment he proceeded to Cuba and passed through the famous battle of Santiago. In 1906 he fought with the Americans through the Boxer War in China. On his return to the States he received his honorable discharge from the American Government. He then proceeded to Vancouver, B.C., where a regiment known as the British Columbia Horse was being raised to help out England in the war with the Boers. After passing a stiff examination he was given a place in the ranks and for the next two years he lived a soldier's life on the deserts and plains of South Africa. After seeing this war over he returned to Canada and after receiving his discharge again followed the sea and for twelve years sailed in and out of many ports in many lands, being practically around the world twice. During part of the time he commanded an American Revenue Cutter doing duty along the Alaskan Coast. He later purchased an auxiliary schooner and did a good business in the halibut and salmon fishery at Prince Rupert, B. C. In the summer of 1914, when hostilities commenced, he sold out his business and left by the first boat for Vancouver where he enlisted with the Princess Patricia's Light Infantry. Since known as the immortal Princess Patts. Shortly after reaching France he received a transfer to the O. R. C. Corps as mentioned above, and at the battle of Ypres was badly wounded by shrapnel and gassed. On December 28th, 1915, he was placed in the hospital in England where he remained for 8 months. On September 22nd, 1916, he arrived in this city by the S. S. Florizel, ill of health and broken in body. While his features showed still visible signs of the effects of poisonous gasses, he remarked calmly to a Telegram reporter that his fighting days were over and he hoped for the rest and quiet surroundings of the old home-land.

AT REST.

As a mark of respect to the veteran of four wars a firing squad in charge of Lieut. Fraser, consisting of nineteen men and six sergeants, left by yesterday's express to attend the funeral. Arriving at Holyrood the party proceeded to the late home of the deceased where the prayers for the dead were recited by the Rev. Fr. Finn. From there the funeral procession proceeded to the R. C. Cemetery in the following order:— Firing squad with arms reversed. The remains accompanied by six Sergeants as pall bearers. Immediate relatives and a large gathering of the general public. Over the open grave the firing squad under Sergeant Edwards discharged three farewell volleys while Bugler Bugden sounded the Last Post. The firing party returned to town by the regular excursion train last night.

The Star uniforms will be left at the disposal of the players at St. George's Field.

Hospital Patient

Refused Passage.

Yesterday morning at 11.30 o'clock the ambulance from the East End Fire Hall arrived at the railway station with a patient from the General Hospital named Hubert Noworothy of Smith's Square, T.B., who for the past two months was confined to the Hospital suffering from an injured hip and was being sent home to rest, as further surgical treatment was not required for some time. On being taken from the ambulance to the train he was refused admission to the first class car unless he was accompanied by a nurse or some other person to look after him, he being unable to walk or stand. The train officials state that it is not their business to attend to patients going to and from the General Hospital and that Hospital authorities should have seen that the patient in question was accompanied by a competent person. While they are willing to help, and often do assist such people when in trouble, they claim it is unfair to ask them to accept the responsibility. We understand that Mr. Eli Whitway, whose business it is to attend to such matters, was confined to his home yesterday suffering from a severe cold.

At the Legislature.

Both branches of the Legislature will meet this afternoon, the Lower House at 3 o'clock and the Legislative Council at 4. In the former Chamber the Business Profits Tax Bill will be considered in Committee, put through its final stage and sent to the Upper House where it will be discussed at length this evening and to-morrow. Recent developments such as the stuffing of the Upper House with new members are naturally causing wonderment and astonishment and the ultimate outcome of this piece of political machination will be eagerly awaited.

The Premier and Confederation.

Denies Alleged Correspondence With Sir Robert Borden. Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—In Saturday's issue of your paper, in a letter signed "Patriot", the following statement is made:—"If Confederation with Canada is not a live issue with Premier Morris, what was the meaning of the correspondence between him and Premier Borden, which was found in the office of a certain Canadian newspaper in June last and which, after it was found, was made the subject of debate in the Canadian House of Commons?" In relation to this statement I desire to say that it is wholly and absolutely without foundation, as far as I am concerned. I never had any correspondence with Sir Robert Borden in relation to Confederation, directly or indirectly, or with any other person in Canada at any time. As far as I am concerned the item has no foundation in fact. I would be grateful, therefore, if you would give this denial the same publicity in your paper as the statement itself received. Yours faithfully, B. P. MORRIS.
