hat it is so difficult to fill up blanks in a team. As year follows year, perhaps one or two new men make their ap pearance on the ice, but as a rule, few of these are brilliant hockeyists. The reason is, apparently, that youngsters, unless they go to one of the three colleges and get on their school teams. never obtain an opportunity to show what they can do. What is evidently wanted is a Junior League, which will have no connection with the Inter-Collegiate League, and will be organized with the sole purpose of discovering new materiol amongst those boys who hitherto, have not had a chance to show what they can do. Before this can be done, however, a hockey rink is needed and until we get one, there is little likelihood of any progress being made in what is supposed to be our national game. When the good times come, and let us hope they are not far off now, then the sports of St. John's must see that we have a rink devoted wholly and solely to hockey.

Intercollegiate hockey promises to be very interesting this year, and last year's champions will be compelled to look to their laurels, for there seems every prospect of their having odist College or Bishop Feild teams.

The Indian Rope-Trick.

One of the most remarkable stories in Lord Frederic Hamilton's latest book "Here, There and Everywhere" (Hodder and Stoughton, London) is his account of the Indian rope-trick, told him by Colonel Barnard, one-time chief of police in Calcutta. A man offered to show the colonel the trick on condition that he was accompanied by one friend only. The colonel took an English subordinate and also a Kokad and a new roll of films. They arrived at a poor house in the native quarter, where they were ushered into a small courtyard thick with the dense smoke arising from two braziers burning mysterious compounds: "The juggler, naked except for his lion-cloth, appeared and commenced salaaming profoundly, continuing his exaggerated salaams for some little while. Eventually he produced a long coil of rope. To Colonel Barnard's inexpressible surprise, the rope began paying away, as sallors would say, out of the juggler's hand of its own accord, and went straight up into the air. Colonel Barnard kodaked it. It went up and up, till their eyes could no longer follow it. Colonel Barnard kodaked it again. Then a small boy nding by the juggler, commenced ing up this rope, suspended to nothing, supported by nothing. He was kodaked. The boy went up and smoke from the herbs smouldering in the braziers seemed almost to blot out the courtyard from view. The juggler, professing himself angry with the boy for his dilatoriness, started in pursuit of him up this rope, hanging on nothing. He was kodaked, too. Finally the man descended the rope and wiped a blood-stained knife, explaining that he had killed the boy for disoleying his orders. He then pulled the rope down and coiled it up, and suddenly the boy reappeared and, together with his master, began salaaming pro-
