AUDITORIUM EVENING OF READING AND MUSIC

The Emily Waterman Concert Company, under the auspices of the Affiliated Society course, presented an interesting entertainment at the Auditorium Saturday evening. The soclety has put forth every effort towards making these concerts the success they have proved to be, and Saturday night's entertainment was one of the best put on. The program was composed of readings and instrumental, and vocal selections. Mrs. Blanche Bartlett, as an elocutionist, made a decided hit with her numbers, and was forced to respond again and again. Perhaps her number entitled "Why," was most worthy of mention, while "The Wheatfield" and "The Gossip," the latter a humorous little sketch by Hans Andersen was extremely clever. Bartlett possesses a clear, ringing voice, well adapted to her work, and taken in conjunction with her charming personality won for her hearty

Miss Lillian Whitman, planist, gave many delightful compositions. As an accompanist she shows perfect sympathy with the voice. She was forced

The vocal selections by Mr. Raymond May, baritone, were acceptably rendered. Particularly deserving of mention were "The Haunts of the Witches" and "Our Old Doctor McGinn," the latter song a delightfully humorous melody, with a sprightly

WONDERFUL GROWTHOF LONDON BUSINESS PLACE

The "Heart of London" Store HIS RECOVERY EXPECTED Grows From Small Place to One of Largest Stores in

From a modest little store with nominal patronage to one of the largest and best equipped men's furnishing emporiums in the city of London in a little over six years, is the record of the "Heart of London" store, 371 Talbot street, controlled by Mr. Carl P. Wegner. Mr. Wegner came to London from Grand Rapids, where he has two brothers who conduct one of the largest department stores in Michigan, built up by conscientious dealing with the public, which Mr. Wegner is noted for in this city, and which helped him, augmented by his daily bargain list, to give Londoner's one of the best stores of its kind in Western Ontario. Not only do the farmers of Western Ontario patronize the "Heart of London," but the young men of the erry, who are noted for their stylish dress, purchase their ties, shirts, gloves, clothing, etc., there at lower prices than they can get them elsewhere. Courteous treatment of patrons and bargains in goods that always give satisfaction have been the keynotes of much of the success of the store. Mr. Wegner also conducts a wholesale department handling overalls, gloves mittens, sweater coats and rubber goods. During property at present required on the past few years the business has grown to such an extent that Mr. Wegner has, for some time, been endeavoring to secure an addition or extra quarters in connection with his present store.

"It would be a great thing if every young man these days would learn a trade or enter a profession," said Evangelist H. T. "If they would do this they would simply be fulfilling a mission in life, and to work every working day means that they are at least keeping one commandment, "Six days shalt thou labor."

"The man who plays the part of a gentleman, and states that he is a gentleman, and states that he is a gentleman, and states that he is a gentleman and does not have to work, is on a par with a tramp," said the evangelist, for he breaks the commandment by not working at all.
