REYNAL'S LAST MESSAGE. [Canadian Press.]

Paris, June 16 .- The last message received from Major Reynal, commander of Fort Vaux, before the fortress fell ago, was made public here today. The message read:

"We are reaching the limit. Officers and soldiers have all done their duty. Viva la France!

Since the beginning of the real attack on the fort in March the Germans fired no less than 8,000 projectiles daily, and in the last days before its fall this number was greatly increased, according to details of the fighting given out officially today. An eyewitness is quoted as saying: "What the infantry was powerless to realize was accomplished by artillery. For a long time there was only one outlet at the fort his latest dispatches. which could be utilized. This was a subterranean passage to the northwest, access to which later became impossible. Then followed the cutting of communications.

Suffered Greatly.

The men suffered greatly from lack of water, but held out, occupying and utilizing the ruins in the interior. In vindows and between the ruins of shattered walls machine guns were installed and barricades erected at all corners. All about the outer works the bodies of Germans were thick.

The combat continued under extraordinary conditions. The Germans conceived the idea of filling baskets with grenades. These were let down by cords from windows of buildings dominating her late residence, 400 Lyle street, to the French positions and exploded on St. Mary's Church, where requiem high top of the defenders. Arrangements have, it is under stood, been concluded, and camera men have already started at work filming scenes from one end of Canada to the other. These will comprise views of the country's scenie eauties, and pictures of various of its industrial systems. They will carefully chosen so as to present the Dominion, not only as a garden of nature, but also as a land opportunity. They represent the application of the most modern and popular of pictorial devices to the work of promoting immigration and interesting capital in this country, and will be used in variety of ways and by different branches of the Government

Mr. Francis Holley, director of the Bureau of Commercial Economies, Washington, now recognized as one of the greatest modern educational institutions in the world, was in the city today in connec tion with this matter. It is understood Mr. Holley has interested the Canadian Government in the project, and that he has offered to exhibit any views that may be taken free to millions of citizens of the United States throughout the medium of the bureau. The offer is one which, it is likely, will be gratefully accepted by the Government. The use of moving pictures with a view to promoting immigration and trade is in line with the Government's desire to use every means to prepare now for the de velopment which it is expected will come after the war.
