Resolution Passed Demanding Reinstatement of Suspended Employees on Full Pay.

right thus to punish the citizens of Victoria or what they may look upon as a wrong done by the police officers attached in number to the department. I do not think the department had no right to punish a fault of its servants—if a fault had been committed—at the expense of the citizens of Victoria. I hoped that meeting would tell me that the departments of the Government had been taken in dealing with the postoffice employees. He hoped, too, that these postoffice employees and carriers temporarily deprived of their work would not henceforth be referred to as the "scabs" of the postoffice. He was glad to see that the authorities at once anticipated the authorities at Ottawa. In no sense of the term did he believe that suspension of work for the one day last week could be referred to as a strike. He was glad to see that the Government was planning in secret; none of the slanders of the Rev. Solomon (Cleeves) said that never before had he felt that it would be more comfortable to be a preacher than a post office employee. He thought that the comfort was in the stronger language than would perhaps be worn on wearing the cloth. That our post office employees had been shamefully treated in the case of the fire. He said that he would like the flame rest. Had been told that the post office department had promised to send on the provisional allowance to the members of the Victoria office; had not been given and given no satisfactory explanation. He said that it had not been done. If a preacher had done this he would have been branded as a liar. He said he did not think that the Victoria clerks and should not think that they should suffer for the same reasons as he said that they should.

The Tories Lewis seconded Ald. Keith's motion and begged that they be accepted or so doing. He was a member of the Liberal Conservative party, he said, but would vote against them at the next election. He said they did not deal justly with the office of the clerk.

Mr. Alex. Wilson did not think that any resolution would do any good—the men would not be re-elected in any event, or he would be very much mistaken. He blamed Victoria for not having a good police force, and for the clerks and clerks who were as well paid as he was there of Quebec, Sir A. P. Caron's home, Shortly after 12 o'clock the party arrived at the station, a large number of people being there to greet them. The Governor and his party were met by the Mayor of Aberdeen, who welcomed them to the city. The Governor then gave a short speech, in which he expressed his pleasure at being in Aberdeen and his confidence in the future of the city. He then presented the Mayor with a gift, which was a silver cigarette case. The Mayor then presented the Governor with a gift, which was a silver watch.
