

PHILATELIC LITERATURE SOCIETY

The Secretary of this society has evidently "gone to the bad" as he has been advertised in several papers, and pays no attention to our bill for Official Organ. This is the last number members will receive. Those who are not subscribers will be given the Advocate one year for 15c, or for 25c with premium. We hope to retain all the members as subscribers.

How much space shall we reserve for you in our Twentieth Century Number?

Treymond Babcock writes that his address is now c/o Massey Bus. Coll., Houston Texas. He was attending College at Galveston at the time of the terrible storm. He says he got out all right. We extend our congratulations.

Eminent philosophers and scientists say that every young man or woman who expect to make their mark in the world should have their horoscope cast by Astrology. In the hands of an expert astrologer your past, present and future life is like an open book. It will pay you to look up the ad of Prof. Meyer in this issue. We have seen some of his readings and they were remarkable in their accuracy.

Phildius and Caldwell, 124 Java St., Brooklyn, N. Y., have adopted a unique plan to advertise their business. They send out a special circular, which with 10c entitles the holder to a sheet of stamps cataloging over 50c. The circulars will be sent free.

Some of our readers may not know the amount of work connected with mailing a large magazine. It keeps eighteen men, with the fastest mailing appliances, on a rush to mail the Ladies Home Journal to its readers. The Journal's postage bill is about $75,000 a year. In our limited space it would be impossible to give a description of the October Journal. A score of artists and writers contribute to this number; ten cents a copy at all bookstores.

The Youth's Companion has been running some exceptionally good articles by Andrew Carnegie, Sir Edwin Arnold, John Philip Sousa, etc. In the Sept. 20th issue Andrew Carnegie, who laid the foundation of his success by saving a little of his meagre wages, contributes an interesting article on "Thrift."

Many of the merchant princes of today were once poor boys, working for very meagre wages, but by saving a little each week, they arose to high positions in life. Success, published by the McGraw-Marden Co., University Bldg., Washington Square N. Y. City., has a number of articles each month concerning such men, besides other very interesting and instructive reading.
