

tor," "The Ideal Lawyer," etc. There will also be several articles about the theatre.

Canadian.

The serial story promised for 1906 will be "The Last Earl of Ellan," by Mrs. Campbell Praed, a tale of Australian life. During the year several special articles on South America will be contributed by Mr. G. M. L. Brown. A number of contributions on Maritime Union have been arranged for. "Reminiscences of a Loyalist" gives an account of the life of the late Colonel Jarvis, written by himself. This is one of the most interesting features ever secured by the Canadian Magazine.

McClure's.

During 1906 McClure's Magazine will have as its chief feature "Reminiscences of a Long Life," by Carl Schurz. Under the title of "Railroads on Trial," Ray Stannard Baker will discuss the great railroad transportation problems of the United States. William Allen White will contribute character sketches of America's greatest men.

The Outlook.

During 1906 the Outlook will present great public and international matters in articles alive with freshness of interest. Mr. Kennan will write about conditions in China. There will be articles on the Panama Canal, labor problems, etc. The Outlook's editorial survey of the world's news will continue to be a prominent feature, as it has been in the past.

Pall Mall.

Arrangements have been made with a number of favorite authors to contribute to the Pall Mall during 1906. The exciting adventures of "Commander Mc Turk," by C. J. Cutcliffe Hyne, will be continued for some months. The three series of articles on "The Eton Schooldays of Celebrities," "London at Prayer," and "Famous Houses," will also run on. There will be articles on "Liverpool and the Ship Canal," "The Feeling of Plants," and "The Cave-Dwellers of the Saharan Desert," besides many stories.

Pearson's.

"Washington Society" will be described in a series of letters by Mrs. Samuel Harrison Smith. Stories and illustrations will make up a splendid volume.

Success.

Success Magazine has built up a strong staff of special writers, who will contribute valuable articles in 1906. W. J. Bryan will write a series on "International Pearson's most important contribution for the New Year will be a life of the great French statesman, "Cardinal Richelieu," by Dr. Arnold G. Cameron, who has made researches all over Europe especially for this purpose. The preparation of the "Life of Richelieu" has cost a vast amount of labor and no small sum of money.

Scribner's.

The serial story for 1906, which began in the November number, is by F. Hopkinson Smith, and is entitled "The Tides of Barnegat." "Recollections of Joseph Jefferson," by Francis Wilson, will be a prominent feature. There will be a series of articles by Ernest Thompson Seton, and another series dealing with the railways of the future. "The First Forty Years of Affairs," Samuel Merwin will take up several phases of modern life, showing the progress that has been made. Vance Thompson will write on diplomatic affairs. Homer Whitfield will discuss foreign captains of industry.

THE HARMSWORTH SELF-EDUCATOR.

Over $15,000 has been spent in the last four weeks to advertise the "Harmsworth Self-Educator" in Canada. This is an almost unparalleled expenditure for advertising in this country, but it is warranted both by the importance of the publishers and the importance of the work. The "Self-Educator" is a magazine of usefulness, to be issued every two weeks at 15 cents per number. It will run to 50 numbers, making a total cost to a purchaser of $7.50. The newsdealers of Canada will be given every opportunity to profit by the introduction of the "Self-Educator" into the country, for the publishers are anxious to make all sales through them.

The "Self-Educator" cost the Harmsworth firm $150,000 before the first page was even printed. Over two millions of Great Britain's forty millions of people are already reading and enjoying this publication. It will be offered to Canadians, re-edited, printed and published in Canada on Thursday, December 14.
