PITTYPAT AND TIPPYTOE. EUGENE FIELD.

All day long they came and go,
Pittypat and Tippytoe;
Footprints up and down the hall,
Playthings scattered on the floor,
Fingermarks along the wall
Tell-tale streaks upon the door,
By these presents you shall know
Pittypat and Tippytoe.

How they riot at their play!
And a dozen times a day,
In they troop demanding bread,
Only buttered bread will do.
And that butter must be spread
Inches thick with sugar, too!
Never yet have I said: "No,
Piltypat and Tippytoe!"

Sometimes there are griefs to soothe, Sometimes ruffled brows to smooth; For, I much regret to say, Tippytoe and Pittypat Sometimes interrupt their play With an internecine spat; Fie! ob, fie! to quarrel so, Pittypat and Tippytoe!

Oh, the thousand worrying things
Every day recurrent brings!
Hands to scrub and bair to brush,
Search for playthings gone amiss,
Many a nurmuring to hush,
Many a little bump to kiss;
Life's indeed a fleeting show,
Pittypat and Tippytoe!

And when day is at an end,
There are little duds to mend;
Little frocks are strangely torn
Little shoes great holes reveal,
Little hose but one day worn,
Rudely yawn at toe or heel!
Who but you could work such woe,
Pittypat and Tippytoe!

But when comes this thought to me:
"Some they are that childless be,"
Stealing to their little bods,
With a love I can not speak,
Tenderly I stroke their heads,
Fondly kiss each velvet cheek,
(rod help those who do not know
A Pittypat or Tippytoe!

On the floor, along the half,
Rudely traced upon the wall.
There are proofs of every kind
Of the havoe they have wrorght.
And upon my heart you'd find
Just such trade marks, if you sought.
Oh, how glad I am 'it's so,
Pittypat and Tippytoe!

THE POET. A Short Essay on the Qualities Required in A Child of Song. The poet must have the sensitive heart of an angel, the fancy of a fairy or some spiritual creature, the eye of an artist, the ear of a musican, the glowing and eloquent tongue of an orator, the industry of a laborer, the cool judgment of a critic; his genius must consist more in that all-pervading sensibility and sus ceptibility of leering, emotion, passion, than in his reasoning powers or his thoughts; his heart must be ever alive to those occurences which are tender, deicate, affectionate, melancholy, noble, true, and beautiful; his eye must be capable of appreciating all that is fuscin-ating, exquiste, excellent, and interesting in nature; his ear must be attunded to harmony and measure, euphonious and musical sounds must delight him, and he must be able to detect every thing that is discordant, harsh, grating, and inharmonious in the slightest particular; his Inguage must be rich, growing, thrilling, ringing, glittering, flashing, sparkling, luxurious; his perception must be quick and accurate; he must be able to discern all that is beautiful in the minute objects of nature, all that is sublime in its stupendous works-his imagination must be brilliant, varied, and capable of illimitable illustration; his fancy must be playful, sportive, vivacious, and luxuriant, tinging with light, like the rays of the sun, everything which it touches and enlightening all that it approaches. He must also have industry—enduring, persevering unremitting, contented, practical, worldly industry, combined with forethought, discretion, and judgment; and above all, he must have a critical discrimination which will qualify him to prune the redundancies, of his language and restrain the wildness and richness of his fancy. He must have read every good author without imitating his style, he must borrow a lovely tint from the palette of each without copying any festure of the picture, and the realms of nature, science, history, biography, and every-day me, must be explored by him in such a manner as to place him in posses sion of everything which can adorn, elucidate, strengthen, embellish, and illumin ate his productions. Having exalted himself thus beyond his fellows, having approached near unto heavenly enjoyment, having stored his mind with the treasures of varied knowledge, and prepared for its work by acquisitions from every source of mental cultivation he may find it to be impossible to earn a livelhood, and squeeze from the tight grasp of the unsympathizing publisher what will maintain even himself; then if he has children, heaven help the unhappy offspring of the struggling poet! It is a singular thing that the real benefactors of mankind, those who have made them think more nobly and raised them above their former scale of reflection, have been, with but for reconstruct the least rewith but few exceptions, the least rewarded, while men employed in adjusting the petty disputes of the contentions and litigious, gratifying their vanity for personal display, or contributing to their many pleasures, have been made rich, while the poet-learned, gifted, aspiring. through he be-perishes for lack of food in a garret; or, bowed down by poverty sorrow and disappointment, in some public hospital. Here is the picture of the poet's powers—the poet's destiny, and men should consider well before they ascend a hill which may lead only to a workhouse or an early grave.

TURN THE RASCALS OUT. We refer to such rascals as dyspepsia, bad blood, biliousness, constipation, sick headache, etc., infesting the human system. Turn them out and keep them out by using Burdock Blood Bitters, the natural foo to disease, which invigorates, tones and strongthens the entire system.

Venom of a Toad.

A correspondent of the London Lancet maintains the scientific correctness of Shakespeare's assertion that the toad "sweads venom." He says that this vemon is of a tolerably powerful nature, and that instead of being secreted by the salivary glands as in snakes, it is actually secreted by the skin, so that the word "sweated" is most accurately descriptive.

This secretion, Dr. Guthric states, also occurs in the toad through the parotid glands, the venom being a thick, milky fluid, like the juice of dandelion stalks in faste and appearance. When injected under the skin, it kills small birds in six minutes, and dogs and guines pigs in half an hour to an hour and a half. The symptonis in birds are loss of coordination followed by death; in guinea pigs convul-sions, and in the dog depression, vomit-ing and intoxication.

Dr. Guthrio kept a small toad in a cage with some lizards, and one of them, hav-ing bitten the toad, became convulsed and died in less than two minutes. His dog, having seized a toad, was attacked by instantaneous and profuse salivation, violent vomiting and collapse. He states also that his hand was poisoned from handling a toad.

FARMERS' COLUMN.

A GRAIN OF SALT.

It Will Aid in Keep Cows and Other Stock in Vigorous Health.

Salt has always been recognised as not only a useful, but a needful addition to the food of dairy cows. We do not think that dairymen can ever become so progressive that they can dispense with the use of the saline mineral as a neces-sary condiment for stock.

Nature is more wise than man, and never calls for anything not required to meet her physical wants. Because salt has now become so common an article of commerce and is so largely fed to domestic animals is no reason that it was not required by them when in a wild state. All undomesticated herbivorous animals crave salt, and will travel many miles to obtain it from natural salt licks.

A necessity, then, so plainly marked, should not be ignored, and dairymen should consider it all-important rhat their cows are regularly saited. Do not let the cows get starved for this necessity by long intervals between indulgence, as it good effect is thereby greatly les sened.

Better than salting cows even once a week, is keeping salt by them all the time. The animals will not eat more than they want, and what their appetite craves their nature requires. Some pooh at the idea that salt is especially valuable in the dairy, but we know by ex-perience that cows give more milk when it is fed to them regularly, and the cream from such milk more readily yields butter in the churn. It is not too much to say that it is as essential to put salt into a cow's stomach as it is to add it to the butter which she yields.

One of the mainsprings to success in dairying is to keep the cows in vigorous health, that they may be able to dis-charge their functions in a natural man-A bright eye, soft and shining hair, and a sharp appetite are indicative of perfect health, conducive to which is the use of salt as craved by the bovine appe-

Most dairymen make it a point to salt theis cows with more or less regularity, but occasionally one is found who signally neglects this essential except at rure intervals, when the overdose is nearly worse than none at all.

We have noticed cows thus deprived were rough of hair, dull of eye, and in-different milk yielders. Of course an owner that would neglect them in one cssential would in another, and all of the little neglects combined render them profitless. A cow that has what salt she wants will drink more water, eat more fodder, and yield more and better milk than when she is stinted in this regard. If salt is kept by the animals all of the time, do not be afraid that they will overeat of it, as they will only lick up what they need and when they need it.

Salt is a potent digestive agent also, and is a valuable aid to nature in this way. Dairymen, do not despise salt, but keep your cows supplied with it.--George E. Newell, in Prairic Farmer.

It is always best to examine the eggs set for hatching a week after they are put under the hens.

So far as is possible give the poultry plenty of range; they need exercise and plenty of room to take it.

When feed must be purchased one of the best and cheapest, especially for young poultry, is millet seed.

One of the best plans of management with the chickens and turkeys is to change the males at least once every

With both turkey and duck eggs it is a good plan to moisten with water the day that they were expected to batch.

On the average, farm hens ought to be kept at not over 50 cents per year each, and on this basis should be profitable.

Some hens never make good sitters, and hence should never be allowed to sit; a good mother is necessary to raise the young fowls.
