He said: Honourable senators, in days gone by every petition for divorce took the form of a bill which, on receiving three readings in the Senate and in the House of Commons, and being given royal assent, became an act of Parliament.

The present custom is to have the Commissioner hear the evidence and in appropriate cases recommend the granting of a divorce by resolution of the Senate. If the Senate considers these reports and grants the resolutions, they will stand before the Divorce Committee for the next thirty days, during which time anyone who wishes to inquire into or oppose any one of them may have the opportunity to do so.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall these resolutions be taken into consideration?

Hon. Mr. Gershaw: Honourable senators, I move that these resolutions be considered at the next sitting of the Senate.

Motion agreed to.
