From Principal Caven's Daughter

What message of cheer are boys at the front next weekto those who are giving up even their lives for us, that we may enjoy peace and liberty? How trivial and unutterably selfish must seem to them reports of many of our political meetings, where so many are putting party first and emphasizing the smallest differences, instead of niting to win the war speedily, which should be to every loyal and right-minded Canadian the question today. You remem-ber Hankey's Lieutenant. "I prayed," he said, "though I am at a religious man. I did not ask for safety or for my life, for that struck me as unfair One must play the game. When death is in the air one must not pray for oneself in that way." And many such there are.

The ballot is the most sacred trust that can be given by any Government to anyone. Therefore, I believe that it is the duty . of every woman to whom the ballot has been given to USE it, and to use it for the help and support of our boys who are standing at the front between as and a fate like that of Belgium. This support and help can only be secured to them by sending on reinforcements as speedily as possible, and this the Union Government will do. NONE OTHER WILL.

My earnest appeal to women who have the ballot and desire to help our boys at the front is, Vote for the Union Government. MARY J. CARMAN.

A Statement by Rev. Dr. Herridge

Rev. Dr. Herridge of Ottawa, ex-Moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, is known throughout the Presbyterian Church of Canada as one of its recognized leaders. both as a preacher and as a thinker. Unon being interviewed upon the question of Union Government he expressed himself as follows:

The one question in the coming election is this: What part shall Canada continue to take in the War? The intrusion of other matters obscures the real issue. During the last three years mistakes have been made on both sides of the House. But, in this supreme crisis of British history, political labels count for little, and concerted effort to bring out at once the effort to bring out at once the utmost martial resources of our land counts for everything. If Quebec lags behind the fault does not lie with the people of that Province, but with the distinguished French - Canadian who has failed to seize the most price of the last province of the unique opportunity of his life. Any pause just now in aggressive action at home; con-cession to mere selfish interests; any attempt to take "under advisement" how we shall deal with the mad dog that is yet unmuzzled would assuredly bring joy to the Ger-man camp. Further, it would prove that we ignored the valor of the firing line of Cana-dians: that we heattered to all menace to the living, and an insult to the dead. Everyone recognizes now that we must not only meet the Ger-mans on the field of battle, but watch for the underhand propaganda at which they are expert. One of the familiar devices by which they have sought to sow the seeds of distrust and dissension between France and England was that which represent ed England as doling out her military effort and keeping a calculating eye upon her own well-being, whilst France, who was not counting the costs, allowed herself to be bled white. It was a mean slander even for such an enemy as Germany, and, needless to say, it had no effect on the clear-sighted and generous-minded French people.

dians; that we hesitated to fill up promptly the thinning ranks; that we dared to offer a

We have long since ceased to wonder at any methods em-ployed by the Germans, however disreputable they may be. To the average Canadian it would seem unthinkable that the same kind of propaganda should be used, not by Ger-mans, but by Canadians in Canada. Yet how are we to explain the campaign that is being carried on by the Laurier press in Quebec, of which the following extract taken from an editorial appearing in Le Soleil of the 20th November, is an example. After protesting vigorously that they are in favor of winning the war, but denving that Canada should send any more men, the Editor

"It is possible that there are people so ill-informed as to assert that at this time the only efficacious way to win the war is by sending soldiers to fight in France * * * * At the beginning of the war, when Great Britain, taken by surprise, was only able to send 100,000 men to the battlefields of France in order to make some show of help, it was just natural and essential that Canada, anxious to give her help cordially and to throw in her contribution for the defence of the mother country, should at first have sent men. * * * Since then, whilst Great Br'tain, under the shelter of the steadfast wall of the Poilus, was organizing and calling her citizens to arms, it was comprehensible that Can-ada should continue on her side to furnish her contributions of volunteers, and assure to Great Britain the time requisite for military reorganization. But the conditions are no longer the same. It is only the Tories sufficiently partisan to stop their ears, who can deny

"Great Britain herself has carefully measured out the employment of her forces, having regard to the man-power of the nation. She has arranged her supply of man forces according what she estimates a scale compatible with her economic life and her future. France, who, without counting the cost during nearly three years, poured out the blood of her s in order to secure to her Allies the time for sufficient organization, now affirms her determination to regulate for the future her sacrifices. She does not intend that on the day of Victory she will be unable to stand upright. "The United States, whose entry into the war brought such succor to the Allies, has equally and also rightly limited its effort in men to actual con-

There is the old slander, under a guise very thinly veiled. The suggestion is that Great Britain is carefully measuring her own effort and asking Canadians to do more than their share. This is the kind of sed'tious and insidious propa-ganda on which Laurier is relying in Quebec.

The Liberal-Laurier candidates who claim to be "win-the-war" men are careful to leave themselves free to vote against any measure which they may think is not a war measure and to defeat the government, if they can on any side issue. Such a defeat, no on any side issue. Such a defeat, no on any side issue. Such a defeat, no on matter how obtained, would place Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Quebec anti-British contingent in charge of the Dominion Government and all Dominion Government and all Dominion Government and all Dominion forces. Should such a condition arise it would be a disaster for our empire and a disgrace to Canada.

Primary lodges should meet weekly, form local committees and invite to their counsels every loyal organization and make victory absolutely sure for the candidates named as Unionists.

Our Orange brethren in Ireland, England, Scotland, Wales, New Zealand, Africa and the Australian Commonwealth have set us the glorious and patriotic example of enthusiasti-cally supporting Union governments Many of our beloved leaders in Britain and in all the British dominions named have entered the Union governments and are doing magnificent service for the empire, cordially working for Britain's triumph with former political opponents and men of differing faiths. These patriotic leaders have laid aside for the time being all political and religious differences. At the close of the war their influence will be greater than ever. Let us in Canada follow their example and show them that Canadian Orangemen will do their very utmost to ensure that this Dominion shall never fail the em-pire in its hour of need. The one way to prove this is to vote only for the Unionist candidates.

From our Orange homes our sons have gone forth to fight for right and for our empire. On every battle front where British soldiers fight, and in every sea where British warships have engaged the enemy, some of our gal-lant brothers have made "the supreme sacrifice," and many more will come back to us maimed and sick. We will be recreant to our obligation and to the liberties bought for us by the blood of our fathers if at this crisis we do not support the premier and his Union government in the coming election, and thereby uphold and strengthen our loyal brethren who are fighting our battle overseas. This election is not a party contest. It is a battle between the loyalists of Can-ada and those "who care for none of those things." In this supreme crisis we as Orangemen may have to do as we have done before—lay aside all other differences and unite to "win the war," for that, after all, is the supreme

The speaker also pointed out the atrocities that would happen if Germany ever won. Speaking of Sir Germany ever won. Speaking of Sir Wilfrid Laurier he described him as an old man of seventy who had done good service to the country, but who was so obsessed with love for power that he would sooner rule anything than not rule at all. The things which he asked the audience to remembe were to go out and get other women to vote, to find out their own polling booth and to be sure to find out who was the Union candidate. Mrs. MacKelcan and Mr. Blight sang several solos, and a demonstration of voting was given by Mr. Birmingham at the close of the addresses.

American Labor Unions Decide Against Strikes in Wartime

Newark, N.J., Dec. 11.—Eight labor union executives of local building trades issued a statement here today in which they said they would recommend to the building trades council that there be no strikes on government shipbuilding work during the war, in view of the facts they learned at conferences with officials in Washington. The government's need of ships, the labor leaders said, was so grave that union labor must sacrifice its peace time prerogative of striking and "stick by the government." As a result of the Washington conferences, the statement added, it is clear that the government regards shiphuliding as of services.
