That is the effect of legislation passed at a quiet but businesslike saturday afternoon session of the house. A number of other measures were either advanced or removed from the order papers.

was finally put thru committee. F. B. Carvell of Carleton, N.B., Triday had been removed by the amendments, with one exception.

The exception was that no step had been taken to make the government railways liable for the imposition of fines for non-observance of orders of the railway board. The Carleton member said he realized the diffi-culty of imposing such a fire, and agreed that in 99 cases out of 100 the government line would carry out the orders of the board anyway. He strongly urged the removal of the restriction which forces a person injured to go to the exchequer court for

It is made an indictable offence, punishable by a fine of not less than $100 for any insurance agent to give $100 for any insurance agent to give rebetes or to make any special conditions not set out in the policy.

Carvell's Outburst.

F. B. Carvell (Carleton, N.B.) was the principal objector and he agreed that the law should be made general but could see no reason for it care. but could see no reason for it any-way. He thought a man doing busi-ness had a right to sell as cheaply as he wanted to.

as if these public ownership faddists have got in their work again." Mr. Carvell agreed that there should be no rebate on premiums, but thought the bill simply struck at the agent who might be willing to cut his percentage a little to get business.

Mr. Doherty said the bill simply made general a principle that had been approved in 1910. The trouble was that companies encouraged an agent to make rebates and then made them up to them with the result that some people paid too much for their insurance and some too little.

The amendment to the criminal code limiting the crown's right to "stand aside" jurors, was given its third reading and passed after E. M. Macdonald (Pictou, N.S.) had put himself on record as opposed to it.
