(b) The executive was instructed. The features of the alliance manifesto with which the premier finds most fault are its criticisms of the failure of the government and the convention to carry out the promises of temperance legislation made by Sir Oliver Mowat and his successors, and its appeal to the electors for independent action intended to secure in the legislature a fuller and fairer representation of the sentiment of the people by the election of men who on the temperance question will hold themselves free from party dictation. In both these matters the executive committee followed the policy definitely approved by exactly the constituency which the premier charges was not consulted.

Concerning the matter of the government's failure to carry out the pledges given, the great alliance convention, held in Toronfo on April 21 last, declared its opinion in the following resolutions adopted:

That this convention expresses its deep regret and disappointment that no legislation has been introduced in fulfilment of the promises of the government and in response to the overwhelming demand of the electorate as expressed in the referendum.

That this convention also expresses its conviction that governments and political parties should be made aware that they cannot continue to ignore demands for adequate temperance legislation, and hope for the support of temperance men.

Concerning the recommendation for the promises of the government made any effort to secure sponse to the mandate of the referendum.

Notwithstanding the inconvenient date and the discouraging conditions, temperance men rolled up a magnificent majority for advance; legislation which, nevertheless. Had Temperance Men a Right to Expect Action by the Convention

It is urged by the premier that "temperance men had no more right to expect a special deliverance from the convention on temperance than had the advocates of other forms of legislation."

The answer to this is that on this great question the government had deemed it desirable to make promises, to take votes, to frame legislative proposals, and that there was dissatisfaction in the country because no action had resulted.

In view of the promises that had been made and the enormous votes for advanced legislation that had been polled, the alliance executive had hoped that the Liberal convention want demand such a forward step in temperance legislation as would have approximated a fulfilment of the government's promises, and would have been a reasonable re-line and will always value the great work done under Sir Oliver Mowat and since in the improvement of the license laws, in the support of which the legislature has been practically unanimous. The fact that this process of improvement ceased in 1897 is explainable by the change of the government's policy of license law amendment to one of promised radical legislation of a much more comprehensive character.

The previous legislation as well as the recent promises led temperance workers to entertain the well-grounded expectations that have been so harshly dispelled. The manifesto said:

"This expectation was justified by the fact that under Liberal leadership in the past the Ontario legislature had enacted important measures reducing the number of liquor licenses and imposing upon the traffic many useful restrictions of much benefit to the country in the curtailment of the liquor cuit.

The appreciated fact that in the year gone by good legislation was enacted, is no explanation nor justification of the failure to carry out the definite undertaking that was given.

The Political Action Recommended.

undertaking that was given.

The Political Action Recommended

The premier's reply to the recommendations for electoral action is not very strong. The alliance manifesto dees not recommend the formation of a third political party. It simply urges all temperance men to endeavor to secure the nomination and election of representatives who will strive to obtain effective temperance legislation, and who will hold themselves free from party dictation in relation to such legislation. Temperance Liberals and temperance Conservatives will act wisely in making this effort as far as possible in the parties to which they belong. It is utterly incorrect to say that such representatives would be expected to submit to the dictation of the alliance. They are expected to use above, a partisanship and act according to their judgment and conscience on this moral issue.

This plan is not new. As already stated, it has been unanimously approved by large conventions of temperance workers. Even the premier has complained that temperance men will not put their principles above their partisanship, and has urged the sending to the legislature of men who will support temperance measures. He ought not to object to action by the alliance to change a condition that he deplores.

We believe that under the present deplores.

We believe that under the present conditions in this country the liquor evil can be most effectively met by legislation abolishing the bar and treating system and drinking in clubs, and imposing upon the liquor traffic such other restrictions as shall most effectually curtail its operation and remedy its evils.

The manifesto does not ask any citizen to support or oppose either a Con-

The manifesto does not ask any citizen to support or oppose either a Conservative or Liberal candidate, but it does ask the Christian electors of Ontario to unite in support of candidates who will strive to obtain the legislation mentioned and so secure the embodiment in law of a principle that has been repeatedly endorsed by such majorities as have never been recorded in favor of any other principle or policy, or in favor of any political party.

This action is made more necessary than ever by the failure on the part of the government to rise to the responsibilities which its position imposed. That government neither took such action nor urged the Liberal convention to take such action as would meet the requirements of the situation, the demands of public opinion, and the piedges that have been voluntarily made.

Lower Rate of Interest.

Washington, D.C., Dec. 16.—The senate to-day passed the Philippine civil government bill. The final vote was preceded by the presentation of many amendments, and a general discussion of them as well as of the provisions of the bill. The most notable change made during the day was the lowering of the rate of interest on railroad bonds to be guaranteed by the Philippine government from 5 to 4 per cent.

All the sub-divisions sent strong delegations. The names going before the convention were: S. A. Egan, Bolton; W. H. Hammell, ex-M.L.A., Beeton; A. E. Scanlon, Bradford; E. A. Little, the late member and James Fraser, Tottenham. Only one ballot was necessary, Mr. Little getting 159 votes out of 265. On motion of Mr. Egan, seconded by Mr. Fraser, Mr. Little's candidature was made unanimous amid the wildest enthusiasm. Short pithy speeches were made by the candidate, Mr. Jas. Duff, the candidate in West Simcoe, and others. Cheers for the King, Mr. Whitney and Mr. Little brought the meeting to a close. With a majority of upwards of a thousand the Conservative candidate's election is assured, and Cardwell will be found among the seats upholding the coming among the seats upholding the coming Whitney government.

Attention is drawn to the advertisement of the Mendelssohn Choir, Toronto, in another column, referring to the decision of the executive committee regarding further subscriptions. The list, which closed on the 6th inst., was such an unusually large one that it was decided to so icit no further subscriptions. As, however, the senting accommodation for these concerts has by no means been entirely subscribed for, subscriptions will still be accepted if sent by mail to the secretary, T. A. Reed, 6 Colborne-street, and such subscriptions will rank on the second ballot in the order in which they are received, entitling the subscribers to the first ballot have been provided for and before the plan is opened to the general public. Following the methods of the leading English festivals, all subscriptions are subject to certain conditions, which have been outlined in previous announcements, and which will be made known to any enquirer upon application to the secretary.
