Colonel Ethan Allen.—Colonel Ethan Allen was a bold officer in the American revolution. He could face the enemies of his country with the most undaunted bravery, and in the field of battle he never shrunk from danger. But he was an opposer of Christianity, and gloried in the character of an infidel. His wife, however, was a pious woman, and taught her children in the ways of piety, while he told them it was all a delusion. But there was an hour coming when Colonel Allen's confidence in his own sentiments would be closely tried. A beloved daughter was taken sick; he received a message that she was dying; he hastened to her bedside, anxious to hear her dying words. "Father," said she, "I am about to die; shall I believe in the principles which you have taught me, or shall I believe what my mother has taught me?" This was an affecting scene. The intrepid Colonel became agitated; his chin quivered; his whole frame shook; and after waiting a few moments, he replied, "Believe what your Mother has taught you."

Dr. Goodwin.—"Ah!" said Dr. Goodwin, in his last moments, "is this dying? How have I dreaded as an enemy this smiling friend!"
