

DEFEAT OF STRIKE SHORTLY IS SEEN IN POLITICAL CIRCLES

Emergency Machinery of Government Working Surprisingly Well

LABOR HEADS HOPE TO RESUME PARLEY

"Peace With Honor" Basis Seems Main Object of Unions Now

BY H. BAILEY
British United Press.
LONDON, May 10.—The emergency organization of the Government is working so surprisingly well that it is the general opinion in political circles, even including the leaders of the labor party, that the Government will inevitably win and win rapidly. The Conservatives naturally expect the most complete victory. The Liberals, who have been quite openly critical of Premier Baldwin's policy, are now, however, proclaiming their belief that, while a Government victory is sure, it will prove highly expensive. Labor leaders are still hoping that the Government will be so impressed by the solidarity of the strikers and the tremendous loss the country is sustaining that it will soon relax its uncompromising attitude and accept a formula for settlement which will save the face of labor and allow the leaders to call off the general strike on a "peace with honor" basis.

POST-STRIKE GUESSING
There is a tendency therefore today to visualize what is going to happen after the strike. The Times this morning discusses this problem and the general sentiment appears to be that the miners' negotiations must proceed from where they were broken off, and the consequences will be most serious all round.

The Liberals, led by the Manchester Guardian, which is inclined to be critical of the Government, is urging this policy emphatically. It is known that Premier Baldwin thinks this way also, but many persons who have long been urging reductions in wages all round to meet foreign competition and reduce the cost of production, will undoubtedly seek to exploit the victory which they anticipate for the Government.

FAIR DEAL WANTED
Whether Baldwin would be able to stand against the pressure they could bring is a problem, but it is feared politically that if the Conservatives do not give the workers a fair deal they will lose prestige throughout the country and will place themselves in grave danger of defeat at the next election. It is pointed out that the British worker is conservative by instinct and always on the side of law and order. The great majority of the British people resent the attempt to hold up the community by a general strike and have answered that threat against the constitution and government by efforts to defeat it. But they do not want wages reduced, and they want the miners to get fair play and when the battle is over they will be inclined to think that the conservative labor, rather than purely labor in the present political sense of the term.

NEW PARTY SEEN
Many ambitious politicians in the Liberal ranks are already foreseeing the creation of a party which will respond to these sentiments, a party which might become the right wing of the labor movement. Naturally, they are talking about Lloyd George leading such a party, but so far all this is mere speculation, although it is indicative that the crisis is going to have far-reaching and long-enduring effects in Great Britain.

There are thousands also, mostly young men, who fought in the war and suffered from high taxation after the war, and who now see their prospects crippled by the general strike. This class resents attempts to be made by the mine owners and the strikers to hold up the country to ransom and their voices are beginning to be heard. They are on the side of constitutional government and many working for the Government, but they are dissatisfied in the manner in which a crisis like the present can arise and everybody be powerless to prevent it.

On the other hand the strike is going to have some beneficial effects. The nation is becoming conscious that the worker must have a fair share of the profits of industry for the revelations with regards to miners' wages have won them sympathy all around. Also as the Times points out today, "The habit of trusting to a government's initiative grew sparse during the war and has left in some quarters a legacy of inertia."

"Now there has come a new opportunity for the revival of individual enterprise. The Government should encourage this enterprise in every sphere of national life and should concentrate its own energies and activities upon the tasks beyond the capacity of individuals."

These are the political symptoms which acute observers are noting with interest.

PROFESSOR SAYS STRIKE WILL FAIL

M'vor of Toronto "U." Probes Data on Upheavals of Industry

TORONTO, May 10.—The odds are against the present general strike in Great Britain succeeding. This is the statement of Prof. R. M. MacIvor, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Toronto, who has been searching the records of general strikes all over the world. According to Professor MacIvor, the strike will fail if it is an economic strike, as the labor leaders claim it is, and it will also fail if it is a direct action strike as members of the British Government are seemingly convinced it is. No general strike on an economic principle has ever succeeded so far, he states. In Prof. MacIvor's opinion the present strike is its incentive idea is an economic strike, a protest against a reduction of miners' wages. As it progressed it would have a tendency to be an attempt to use economic power to determine who should exercise governmental authority, or, in other words, become a direct action strike.

AN INTERNAL BATH DAILY RECOMMENDED

A prominent physician made the remark recently that if people were half as particular in regard to internal cleanliness as they are about external appearance three quarters of our ordinary ailments would be eliminated. This medical man said people did not stop to think of the importance of keeping the system just as clean as one is careful to keep hands, face and body. The result is that the intestinal tract becomes clogged and waste material which should leave the body daily stays there for an indefinite period doing a harm few people realize. So many ills are traceable to these clogging poisons! An internal bath sounds novel, but it is much easier to take than any other kind! A spoonful of Sal Liphobol before breakfast (or any other meal), dissolved in a glass of tepid water acts as a gentle cleanser of the bowels—provides a soothing internal bath that rids the body of dangerous toxic poisons and gives one that feeling of freshness, vigor and well-being. A further advantage of the internal bath lies in the fact that a healthy body ensures an alert and active mind which makes for greater efficiency and happiness in one's daily work.
