WOMEN'S CLOTHES.

(New York Herald.)
"Business women are justified in spending 20 per cent of their earnings on clothes," according to Miss Lillian H. Locke, addressing an audience of women at Columbia University on the "Clothing Budget."
"In starting to plan a clothing budget," Miss Locke said, "it is not well to plan on a yearly basis, since clothing does not have a yearly turnover. The average for a complete turnover in clothing is three years, therefore the budget should be built on that basis."
She exhibited a chart showing relative expenditures for various items of costs, wraps and dresses; 14 per cent should go for outer clothing, such as coats, wraps and dresses; 14 per cent for underclothing, 8 per cent for shoes, 8 per cent for hats, 3 per cent for accessories and 7 per cent for care, cleaning and repair. She estimates the average woman's expenditure for clothing is from 12 to 15 per cent of the total income.
"There is a variation in the scale to suit different classes," she said. "For instance, the bare headed college girl will require fewer hats and gloves than the business woman who rides to work every day on the subway." She stressed color and careful selection as important factors in buying. "The woman with few clothes must consider color carefully or she will find herself with a red hat and a henna coat. Dark or neutral colors and conservative

LONDON AND NEW YORK

(Toronto Star.)
The population of the five boroughs formerly styled Greater New York, but now comprising the city of New York, was 5,620,048 in 1920. The so-called "Metropolitan New York," which has no statutory boundaries and is interpreted in various ways in popular parlance, comprised in 1920 a population of 7,910,415, within an area extending an arbitrary distance of ten miles from the city limits and taking in a number of New Jersey cities and towns. The boundaries of Metropolitan London, with a population of 7,476,168, are clearly defined by statute. The administrative county of London and the city of London had a combined population of 4,496,955 in 1921. From the foregoing you will see that there is no common basis on which to make a comparison of the population of the two vast aggregations.
