The City Cornet band are selling tickets for their third trip around the world. The first was in 1909 when one of the engineers on the Furness line Shenandoah was the lucky ticket holder. The purpose is to have a fair in St. Andrew's Park, October 2nd, when at the close the drawing will take place. The band on their last ticket sale in 1909 found the contest had evoked such interest that there was not a ticket to be had two days before the opening of their fair.

Warning, Steel's shoe stores close tomorrow, Friday evening at seven. They will be open Saturday evening till 11. It is a shame you set better footfall.

RECIPROCITY MEANS BIG MONEY FOR THE FISHERMEN

Hard-working Fishers Will Not Have to Sell Herring for $5 a Hogshead Then

No One Knows Better Than the Tory Candidate That the People Want Free Access to the United States Market.

Back Bay, Charlotte Co., Aug. 9.—Mr. Hart told the electors in St. Stephen some peculiar facts, and in his speech accepting the four times refused nomination of the forlorn hope in Charlotte. For years he was a merchant in St. Andrews and came in contact every day with Bay-side farmers and fishermen. He has known for years what were the young men from the farms and enticed the fishermen's sons across the border, and yet he would thrice the greatest relief measure ever offered our people, and casting aside his convictions of a life time, would ask the farmers and fishermen of Charlotte to vote for him and defeat reciprocity.

Mr. Hart is interested in reciprocity, and knows that a limited market is bad, and it may interest the public to know one or two facts about reciprocity and its effects on the workers.

Last summer for instance, a run of herring too large for saildries struck in the Passamaquoddy, and a number of weirs made great catches. The herring were sold for smokers at 80 a hogshead. It is an absolute fact, proven by experts employed by the Fishermen's Union, that the buyers could have paid 840 a hogshead and still had a good profit for themselves. The fish were taken to Eastport and lumber and fishermen of Charlotte to vote for him and defeat reciprocity.

Reciprocity makes smoked fish free. Every fisherman on the coast can go into his business, practically free of tax, and more daily looking article can be put on the market. All that is wanted to line the shores of Charlotte county with smoke houses, is reciprocity, and Mr. Hart, when he says: "Things are good with us as they are," would have us believe that $5 is better for us than $20 or even $100 for a hogshead of herring.

Reciprocity opens an unlimited market for fish of all kinds, and every fisherman along the coast knows what closed the hundreds of smoke houses and knows what will open them again, and knowing, do not hesitate to say that Tory votes along the coast are the greatest election day as smoke houses are now.

SAVED RUSSELL SAGE AND DIED PENNILESS

Laidlaw, Who Prevented Death of Financier by Bomb, Sued Him in Vain.

New York, Aug. 9.—William R. Laidlaw, who twenty years ago was named by a bomb thrown at Russell Sage, died yesterday in the Home for Incurables at the Bronx. Laidlaw is said to have died penniless.

When Henry W. Norcross, of Boston, buried a bomb at Sage in his office Laidlaw declared that aged financier thrust himself in front of him and he stood the brunt of the explosion and thus saved Sage from injury. Laidlaw, who was a partner in the firm, sustained 180 wounds from the burning bomb and had been an invalid ever since. He sued Sage in several courts and once obtained judgment for $40,000, but a higher court reversed the decision.

When Laidlaw's funds were exhausted in his suits against Sage his sisters supported him and after Russell Sage's death they made an appeal to Mrs. Sage. The sisters said today that Mrs. Sage had refused to assist Laidlaw and that it became necessary to send him to the Home for Incurables two weeks ago.

LONDON ON VERGE OF FAMINE

Troops Will Have To Be Called Out to Curb Strikers—Railway Carmen Went Out This Morning

(Canadian Press)

London, Aug. 10.—The neighborhood of the docks was practically under mob rule today with the result that there was such a dwindling of food supplies that the metropolis experienced something akin to that which might happen if a hostile foreign force succeeded in interrupting Great Britain's trade routes. Unless great progress is made today in the negotiations looking to a settlement of the strike of dock workers, the calling out of troops seems inevitable as the police are seriously outnumbered and unable to deal with the emergency.

The only quarter where relief was experienced was Billingsgate, where striking fish porters obtained all they wanted and returned to work. On the other hand hundreds of railway car men quit this morning and several stations were practically in a state of siege, strikers prevailing by force all attempts to handle goods. It was in the interest of strikers to the up all street traffic without fear of interruption in a few hours. Should they be successful London would be seriously near actual famine conditions.

The stream of motor traffic, today, was hardly half its usual proportion. So short was the supply of petrol that hundreds of motor buses and taxi-cabs were unable to turn a wheel. The only traffic passing without fear of interruption was that of vans carrying hospital stores. These were labelled with big red cross signs with a permit from the strike committee explaining why they must not be interfered with.

Until this system of identification was adopted this morning the hospitals felt a shortage of ice and other supplies.

Thousands of tons of fruit, vegetable and provisions are rotting on the wharves and in the railway freight stations. The central meat and provision market are short of supplies and prices have advanced alarmingly. Today the temper of the strikers appeared ugly and scenes of violence were reported.

Throughout the east end clashes were frequent wherever attempts were made to move goods. The men were armed with clubs and bricks and the inadequate squads of police were unable to control the riotous strikers. Police charges were made every few minutes but they were not strong enough to have much effect.

Detachments of troops arrived here today to assist the police but have been unable to control the multitude of brick-bats and stones met the soldiers but they finally took up strategic position and enabled the police to get on with their work. Charges to effect a clearance of the provision and other goods at the Central Railway station. A large detachment of police with each load of bricks, stones, etc. placed, and the police, at the exhausted, retired and the places were taken by mounted men.

TWO MEN OF WEIGHT WITH BRITISH PRESSMEN

Owner of Belfast Evening Telegraph and Editor of the Scotsman to Make Their Stay in Eastern Canada

Of the twelve British journalists who will arrive in St. John on Wednesday, Aug. 16th in their tour through Canada the senior members of the delegation are R. H. Baird, J. P., publisher of the Belfast Evening Telegraph and J. P. Creal, editor of the Scotsman. Both these gentlemen will spend the greater part of the time in eastern Canada.

Robert Hugh Huxley Baird, J. P., is one of the prominent citizens of Belfast, the city of his birth. He was educated at the Belfast Evening Telegraph and Royal Academical Institution where began the development of that energy and intellect which has created the circle of papers which he controls. His father, the late William S. Baird, J. P., was one of the original founders of the firm of W. & G. Baird, Limited, Royal Avenue, Belfast, still one of the largest printing and newspaper publishing concerns in the United Kingdom and publisher of the Belfast Evening Telegraph, a paper with the largest circulation in Ireland and an issue of twenty editions daily.

From this original publication, through the genius and energy of Mr. Baird, have sprung the Irish Daily Telegraph, the Belfast Weekly Telegraph, Ballymena Weekly Telegraph, Larne Times, Irish Post and Ireland's Saturday Night. Over six hundred hands find employment in the Royal Avenue offices of the Belfast Evening Telegraph.

Mr. Baird is a thoroughly qualified, practical journalist as well as a printer, and is competent in all departments. Since the death of his father in 1886, he has had the sole management of the firm, all the details coming under his personal supervision. The big block of buildings owned by the firm is one of the attractions of visitors to Belfast.

Mr. Baird is one of the founders of the Ulster District of the Chartered Institute of Journalists, of which he has been twice president. Electricity for printing and general driving purposes was first introduced into Ireland by him. The Evening Telegraph being the first produced by electricity 1887. Mr. Baird is a socially person grata in the circles in which he moves. He is a prominent member of the Masonic Order and was a type of Ireland's best combining energy and courage with a hospitality that is unequalled.

J. P. Creal, editor of The Scotsman was born in 1822, and received his education at the private school of the Rev. Mr. Haddington. That Mr. Creal should become a journalist was but natural. In view of his father's long connection with that profession, he being one of the early contributors to the Scotsman in the provinces. It was in the office of his father that Mr. Creal received his early training, and that insight into many details of the profession, which had the foundation of the success he has attained. After his apprenticeship he spent three years at the Liverpool Advertiser in 1872. Here he remained but a short time leaving to take up a position on The Scotsman.

The ability of Mr. Creal can be judged from the fact that so important a paper as The Scotsman has appointed him as chief editor during his long connection with this publication. He did valuable service in connection with a mission to the Hebrides, his duty being to investigate and report on Crofter conditions and the land question. In 1881, when the gallery of the House of Commons opened its doors to the provincial press, Mr. Creal was sent to the Scotchman as a special correspondent. In this capacity he served some twenty-five years.

To fill such important posts for a quarter of a century is an accomplishment of no mean worth, and Canada is fortunate indeed to receive a visit from a journalist of such capacity, experience and sympathies for the Scotsman has always enjoyed an exceptional interest towards the Dominion of Canada.

John Burns's Address

John Burns, in his opening address, described the conference as useful, practical, and human. It was useful because it had a message of hope to an army of nearly 500,000 people in this kingdom who were ill and sick through tuberculosis in some of its forms. It was practical because it sought to terminate the premature death of two army corps of men and women who annually went to their death before their time by what he regarded as a preventable disease. The conference was human because it determined to cooperate with the medical officers of town and county councils and the private practitioners, and to do all in their power to help in this important work.

It was important in fighting an enemy to know where he lurked, how he could be discovered, uncovered, and fought, and he was glad to say that the enemy was not so strongly entrenched as he was. He did not inspire the fear that he had done. He was regarded as available, and even destructive. Tuberculosis in all its forms was a declining disease. He thought in twenty-five or thirty years its annihilation ought to be effected, and consumption and tuberculosis ought to be only memories of the past, just as typhus, leprosy, and plague now were. (Applause).

His Majesty Sends Message To National Association Conference at Windsor

(Plymouth, England, Mercury)

A message from the king, dated from Holywood Palace, to Dr. J. J. Perkins (honorary secretary), was read by Sir William Younger (the chairman) to the annual conference of the National Association for the Prevention of Consumption and Other Forms of Tuberculosis, which opened on Wednesday at the Caxton Hall, Westminster. His Majesty wrote:

"As patron of the National Association for the Prevention of Consumption and Other Forms of Tuberculosis, I congratulate all who will take part in the annual conference which assembles tomorrow, and I sympathize deeply with the Association's work, so far-reaching in its influence upon the future of the human race. I note with interest the important questions to be dealt with at the conference, and the names of the eminent authorities by whom they will be addressed."

The conference is being attended by about 500 representatives of public health authorities in all parts of the country. In view of the importance of the question being held in this year exclusively to a consideration of the proposals of the Budget so far as they affect tuberculosis, the best way of expending the grants voted for dealing with the disease. The subject is of special interest to the public mind.

1. Education—the spread of knowledge about tuberculosis among the community.

2. The machinery of detection, and hospital, the tuberculosis exhibition is also held in connection with the conference.

3. Treatment in the sanatorium and the home.

4. After care of patients.

5. The administrative and financial aspects. A tuberculosis exhibition is also being held in connection with the conference.

Sir Wm. Younger was supported by John Burns, (president of the local government board) (Waldorf Astor, M. P., Professor William Osler, Professor Sims Woodhead, Sir T. D. Acland, Dr. Collingridge (medical officer for the city of London) and others.
