SEEKING TICKET SCALPERS.

New York Central Losing Thousands of Dollars Through Transportation given for Advertising.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Detectives in the employ of the New York Central Railroad are trying to identify scalpers who have altered tickets given in exchange for advertising.

Through the aid of two young women, who sold advertising tickets to scalpers, not knowing that they were doing wrong, the detectives believe can find one of the scalpers.

George H. Daniels, general passenger agent of the New York Central, yesterday estimated that the road's loss would reach several thousand dollars during the last three months. The names on the tickets, the destinations and the dates were altered in many cases.

In addition to the ladies themselves, the others who will assist are two well known Halifax artists, Miss Elsie Macdonald, and pupil of Alford Schroeder, and Miss Margaret White, pianist, pupil of Arthur Foot.

FOUND JENKS WET.

Mr. Hackett's Employee Went to Bank with Checks and Cash—He Deposited the Former.

(New York Herald.) James K. Hackett's office, at No. 1,215 Broadway, were like the end of the third act of one of his dramas yesterday afternoon. James Jenks, a confidential employee, had started to the Mutual Bank with $200 in checks and $150 in cash about eleven o'clock in the morning and had failed to return. Mr. Hackett reported the disappearance of Jenks at the West Thirtieth street station and Detective Brennan started an investigation, while a general alarm was telephoned to police headquarters.

At the bank Brennan learned that Jenks had deposited the $350 in checks. But Jenks could not be found.

Hanging over a fence at Madison avenue and Thirty-second street, seeking wet from the rain and looking as if he had been put out to dry, Police-man Bushnell, of the Tenderloin station, found a man at three o'clock. Bushnell called the patrol wagon and the limp one was bundled off to the station. He woke up a little there.

"What's the trouble, old sport?" asked the sergeant, as he prepared to take the prisoner's pedigree.

"Birth day old sweatheart of mine—made me very sad," was the tearful answer.

"What's your name?" "James Jenks."

"Hat" exclaimed all the sleuths in the station. "Found at last!" Then they searched him and found $128 in his pockets. Mr. Hackett was notified, and he asked that Jenks be allowed to sleep until he felt better, when ball would be furnished. He said it was "all right" about the $22.

THE TURF.

Tetrel's Wins Again. WATERVILLE, Me., Aug. 12.—The second annual meeting of the Eastern Horse Breeders Association closed here today with the classes postponed from Thursday.

Tetrel S. won the free for all, reducing the track record to 2:13.4. His closest opponent was Dan Q., a local horse. The track was in very good condition and all the races excellent.

TWENTY YEARS AFTER.

The Report on Water Supply Improvement Submitted by Engineer Fieley Two Decades Ago

Twenty years ago a noted engineer, A. Fieley, made an examination into St. John's water supply and presented a report. In comparison with Engineer Barbour's recommendations yesterday the old report is interesting.

Engineer Fieley in his plan for the improvement of the water works laid great stress on the advantages of the water shed of Little River. While its supply is practically inexhaustible, fed as it is by near-by lakes and streams, he thought its storage capacity too small, and recommended as a remedy the establishment of storage reservoirs.

These, he pointed out, would conserve the waste water. He regarded the three mains, then running from the reservoir at Little River, as amply sufficient for the conveyance of the quantity of water consumed at that time, and believed that the great need in the water system was an increase of the pressure on the summits.

To increase the pressure on the summits, Engineer Fieley recommended the division of the water district into a low service and a high service, a recommendation made the year previous by Gilbert Murdoch, C. E. The low service district he thought could be fully supplied from the reservoir at Little River, while for the supply of the high service he suggested two methods. The first method was the one advocated by Gilbert Murdoch. It consisted in utilizing the higher altitude of the surface of Loch Lomond by bringing its water directly to the city through one of the 24 inch mains. The route through Lake Latimer, he thought the best.

The other method for the supply of the proposed high service was seemingly the creation of Engineer Fieley's reservoir. It consisted in the erection of a pumping plant in connection with the water works as then existed, at a cost of about $50,000.

Engineer Fieley, however, favored the gravity system, as he thought it would provide better and more water, and besides would constitute a permanent improvement.

SMALL BOYS AND PEANUTS.

Runaway Horse Unsets a Baker and Then There Was Lots of Fun.

A confused mass of horse, wagon, peanuts, peanut stand, and small boys made a lively picture on Main street yesterday afternoon.

While the express wagon of Henry Maher, the North End grocer, was being driven up Main street it was suddenly toppled over by means of a pile of dirt thrown up on the street. It fell over on the sidewalk and the driver, a lad named Keefe, rolled out uninjured. The horse, freed from the control of the rein, ran away at a top notch speed, dragging the overturned wagon after it. It had not gone far when it came in contact with a whistle peanut baker from the confectionery store of Phillips & Foley. The peanut baker was jumbled into the street and his precious contents scattered, sent flying in all directions.

The horse was brought to a standstill a little farther up the street, close to the store of its owner.

The fun, however, had not ceased, for the gang of small boys who hang about in that vicinity were not slow in making a dash for the liberated peanuts. As fast as their innocent little hands could work they conveyed peanuts from the street to their pockets and ignored the people of the confectionery establishment who were endeavoring to convince them that the peanuts should be returned to the baker, by this time righted to position. The small boys were amply rewarded for their nut-picking and will not want for peanuts for days to come.

EPIDEMIC OF DOG STEALING.

Two Valuable Dogs Have Mysteriously Disappeared During the Past Few Days.

Dog stealing has become quite a profession in the city. Within the past few days two valuable dogs have mysteriously disappeared. The police have been put on the case and so far have been unable to locate the thieves or trace the whereabouts of the dogs.

On Thursday night, John Walsh's valuable dog disappeared. Yesterday an Aberdeen terrier, the only one of its kind to have been stolen by J. N. Harvey, also disappeared. Mr. Harvey says he will reward the person who gives information as to the whereabouts of his dog.

The police are of the opinion that both dogs have been taken from the city. It is probable that both dogs may have been stolen by the same person or persons.
