Second of Crew of Schooner at Halifax Dies--Friction Between Military and Civic Authorities.

FROM SMALLPOX.

IMAN STANDING

ANOTHER DEATH

Halifax, Oct. 16 .- (Special)-Another one of the crew of the schooner Ellen M. Goodwin, quarantined at Lawlor's Island with smallpox, died yesterday. His name was Doucette. The Goodwin sailed early this morning for Gloucester.

Friction between the military and civic authorities over the erection of the grand stand on the north common by private individuals with consent of Col. Biscoe, at present in command of the garriso here, and without asking the consent of the city, caused quite a sensation here today. This morning the commisisoners of the gardens and commons, with a force of men, proceeded to the commons to tear down the structure but Col. Biscoe, who happened to be there at the time putting happened to be there at the time putting the troops through review exercises pre-vented the work of destruction. The civic body held their ground, however, and compelled, the men at work on the stand to stop and placed a force of police about the structure. A meeting of the commissioners was held this afternoon and the metter actived by the metter doing the the night?' the matter settled by the parties doing the work paying a license fee of $200. Col. Biscoe also sent word to the meeting that he had made an error in granting per-mission to the parties to put up the stand without them also obtaining consent from the hills, might have forced the wall and in rront of the gates, might be heard the measured step of the city. A large number of visitors are already in the city and applications are pouring in. Nearly every room in the various hotels and boarding houses has been se cured in advance.

third from 12 to 3 and the fourth from 3 to 6. I speak now of the city in the third watch, or from 12 to 3 'clock. I never weary of looking upon the life of the city in the first watch. That is the hour when the stores are closing. The laboring men, having quitted the scaffolding and the shop, quitted the scanoidng and the shop, are on their way home. It rejoices me to give them my seat in the city car. They have stood and hammered away all day. Their feet are weary. They are exhausted with the tug of work. They are mostly cheerful. With appetites sharpened on the swift turner's wheel and the carpetter's whetstone they seek the evening meal. The clerks, too, have broken away from the counter and with brain weary of the long line of fig-ures and the whims of those who go a-shopping seek the face of mother or wife and child. The streets are thronged with young men setting out from the great centres of bargain making. Let idlers clear the street ST ERLING B. GUARD BY NIGHT, But, There A Deeply Suggestive And Solemn Thing To Dr. Talmage. "WHAT OF THE NIGHT?" The Four Watches of the Night According to the Division of the Ancients-Vivid Description of the Third Watch of the Night. Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Chirada, in the year One Thousand Nine Hun-dred and One, by Winistin Early, of Joconto, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. Washington, Oct. 13 .- In this discourse Dr. Talmage describes some of the scenes to be witnessed late at night in the great cities and warns the unwary of many perils; text, Isaiah xxi, 11, "Watchman, what of When night came down on Babylon Ninevah and Jerusalem, they needed careful watching, otherwise the incendiary's torch might have been thrust into the very heart of the metropolilook. Beastliness and rags. See those glaring eyeballs. Be careful now what you say. Do not utter any insult, do not utter any suspi-cion, if you value your life. What is might be heard the measured step of the watchman on his solitary beat; silence hung in air, save as some passerby raised the question, "Watchman, what of the night?" It is to me a deeply suggestive and solemn thing to see a man standing guard by night. It thrilled through me as at the gate of an arsenal in me as at the gate of an arsenat in Charleston the question once smote me, "Who comes there?" followed by the sharp command, "Advance and give the countersign." Every moral feacher stands on picket or patrols sented in baptism. This little one never smiled. It never will smile, the form for tons of hay yearly, and has forty areas for the story dawhed on that brow for many a year. No ray of hope ever will dawn on that brow. But the light has gone out. Do not strike anoth-er light. It would be a mockery to kindle another light in such a place as that. Pass out and pass down the street. Our cities are full of such homes and the worst time the third watch of the night. In the third watch of the night gambling does its worst work. What though the hours be slipping away and though the wife be waiting in the cheerless home? Stir up the fire; bring on more drinks; put up more stakes! That commercial house that only a little while aga threw my arms around her neck, and I said: 'Mother, I will do better but you must help, I can't do this alone.'" I knelt and prayed. That this winter be wrecked on a gam-bler's table. There will be many a money till that will spring a leak. In the third watch of the night pass night his soul went to the Lord who down the streets of these cities, and you hear the click of the dice and made it. Eut there is a man who will not the sharp, keen stroke of the balls on the billiard table. At these reform. He says, "I won't re-form." Well, then, how many acts merchant princes dismount, are there in a tragedy? I believe there are five acts in a tragedy. and legislators, tired of making laws, take a respite in breaking Act first of the tragedy: A young them. All classes of people are rob-bed by this crime — the importer of man starting off from home; parents and sisters weeping to have him go; foreign silks and the dealer in Chatwagon rising over the hill; farewell kiss flung back. Ring the bell and ham street pocket handkerchiefs. The clerks of the store take a hand af-ter the shutters are put up, and the officers of the court while away their let the curtain fall. Act the second: The marriage al-tar; full organ, bright lights; long In Baden-Baden, when that city was the greatest of all gambling places on carth, it was no unusual white veil trailing through the aisle; prayer and congratulation and exclamation of, "How well she looks!" thing the next morning, in the woods around about the city, to find the Act the third: A woman waiting for staggering steps; o'd carments stuck into the broken window pane; suspended bodies of suicides. Whatever be the splendor of surroundings, there is no excuse for this crime. The thunders of eternal demarks of hardship on the face; biting of the nails of bloodless fir gers; neglect and cruelty and de-spair. Ring the bell and let the struction roll in the deep rumble of that gambling tenpin alley, and as man come out to join the long procurtain fall. cession of sin all the drums of death beat the dead march of a thousand a dark place - grave of the child that died for lack of medicine, grave of the wife that died of a broken heart, grave of the man that died of In the third watch of the night also drunkenness does its worst. The drinking will be respectable at 8 o'clock in the evening, a little flushed at 9. talkative and garrulous at 10, at 11 blasphemous, at 12 the hat falls off, at 1 the man falls to the floor, asking for more drink. Strewn through the drinking saloon of the city, fathers, husbands, sons as good as you are by nature, per haps better. In the high circles of society it is hushed up. A mer-chant prince, if he gets noisy and and uncontrollable, is taken by his fel low revelers, who try to get him to bed or take him home, where he falls flat in the entry. Do not wake up the children. They have had dis-grace enough. Do not let them know it. Hush it up. But some-times it cannot be hushed up when the put doubter the brain and the the rum touches the brain and the man becomes thoroughly frenzied Such a one came home, having been absent for some time, and during his absence his wife died, and she lay in the next room, prepared for the obsequies, and he went in and dragged her by the locks and shook her out of her shroud and pitched her out of the window. Oh, when rum touches the brain you cannot hush it up! My friends, you see all around about you the need that somethin radical be done. You do not see the worst. In the midnight meetings in London a great multitude have been saved. We want a few hundred Christian men and women to comdown from the highest circles of society to toil amid these wandering and destitute ones and kindle up a light in the dark alley, even the gladness of heaven. Do not go wrapped in your fine furs and from slumber roll over the your well filled tables with the idea heart of the great town, submerging that pious talk is going to stop the greawing of an empty stomach or to pain. Let the city sleep. But, my friends; be not deceived. There will be to-night thousands who will not sleep at all. Go up that dark alley, and be cautious been deceived as take prayer. There is a great deal of common sense in what the poor woman said to the city misthe prostrate form of a drunkard ly-ing on his own doorstep. Look about you, lest you feel the garrot-er's hug. about you, lest you feel the garrot-er's hug. Look through the broken window pane and see what you can see. You say, "Nothing." Then listen. What is it? "God help us?" No footlights, but tragedy ghastlier and mightier than Ristori or Edwin Booth ever enacted. No light, no fire, no bread, no hope. Shivering in the cold, they have had no food for twenty-four hours. You say, "Why don't they beg?" They do, but they get mothing. You say, "Why don't they beg?" They do, but they get mothing. You say, "Why don't they deliver themselves over to the almshouse?" Ah, you would not ask that if you ever heard the bitter ery of a man or a child when told he must go to the alms-house. "Oh," you say, "they are vicious poor and therefore they do not deserve our sympathy!" Are they vicious? So much more need they our pity. The Christian poor, God helps them. Pass on through the alley. Open the door. "Oh," you say, "they are they seen locked. No burglar would be tempted to go in there to steal anything: "Cnly a broker chai's tands against the door." Shove it back. Go in. Strike a match. Now, took. Beastliness and rags. See those glaring eyeballs. Be careful

I never had a better friend. He wel-comed me to my home at the west. He was of splendid personal appear-ance, but he had an ardor of soul and a warmth of affection that made me love him like a brother. I saw men coming out of the saloons and that red mark on the wall? It is the mark of a murderer's hand! gambling hells, and they surrounded my friend, and they took mim at the weak point — his social nature but of the darkness and out from the straw in the corner, coming  $t\phi$  had a fair talk with him for h ward you, and as they come near you your light goes out. Strike an-other match. Ah, this is a babe, not like those beautiful children pre-way. I said to him, "Why don't you give up your bad habits and become a Christian?" I remember me, "who comes there?" followed by the sharp command, "Advance and give the countersign." Every moral teacher stands on picket or patrols the wall as watchman. His work is to sound the alarm, and whether it be in the first watch, in the second watch, in the third watch or in the fourth watch to be vigilant until the daybreak fings its "morning glories" of blooming cloud across the trellis of the sky.
