

with very great interest, and I am much obliged to you for having given me an opportunity of reading the writer's outspoken and intelligent review of the position of an Indian Niceray under the rapidly altering circumstances of that Country.

With you I speak enough to tell Mr. Witham that it would give me very great pleasure to see the book to which Mr. Roy refers, should that gentleman be good enough to forward me a copy? Will you also be so good as to add that I will not fail to hear in mind Mr. Witham's recommendation of Mr. Roy for a continuation of the recognition which he has, it appears, already received at the hands of the Government of India?

Mr. Witham will perhaps be so good as to convey the expression of my thanks to Mr. Roy for his kind thought.

I am
dear Sir Charles
yours sincerely
