What We Earn.
Few things are impossible to those who are ready to pay the price of labor. No person has a right to an ability which has not been secured by training and it is certain that such ability will be imperfect and conducive to disappointment in its failure. If it has not been acquired by hard work and preparation. There is no royal road to anything. The things we covet in others can be ours if we do what is necessary to get them—what those we envy have done, through their labor was not advertised.

Value Friendship.

Friendship is too precious. If it is real to be lightly thrown away. The time will come, no matter how many acquaintances you may have, when your heart will turn to the deeper relationship, and when nothing can take the place of that voice you know and the touch of that hand that has clasped yours so many times. But if you have deliberately given up that friendship, can you expect to call it back to you at your will?

Dealing With Trouble.

Never hunt trouble. However dead a shot one may be, the gun he carries on such expeditions is sure to kick or go off half-cocked. Trouble will come soon enough, and when he does come, receive him as pleasantly as possible. Like the tax collector, he is a disagreeable chap to have in one's house, but the more amiably you greet him the sooner he will go away.

All Had Long Lives.

Joseph Jackson of Blackburn, England, who survived to see his eighty-seventh birthday, was one of eight brothers and sisters, not one of whom failed to pass the eightieth milestone. And quite recently there was living at Milverton, West Somerset, five brothers and sisters, the eldest of whom—Mrs. Shattock—was ninety-two, and the youngest—Mr. James King—just ten years young.

Be Courteous to All.

Frequently the girl who is scrupulous about interrupting an older person, thinks nothing at all of breaking in on the story her small brother is trying to tell, and talking on without paying the least attention to him. There are not two standards of courtesy, one for older people, and another for children.

Today's Possibilities.

There is only one way to enjoy life, and that is to enjoy it in pieces—a bit here and a bit there. And a great many little bits make up a big bit. We all know that the richest people are not the happiest by any means. After all, what have they that takes the place of youth and health, of work and play?

Outside of Man's Rights.

The "mental neutrality" which is born of ignorance or lassitude is unworthy of consideration. We have no intellectual right to be ignorant when information lies at our hand, and we have no spiritual right to be weary when great moral issues are at stake.

First Japanese Gardens.

The Japanese gardens were first started in miniature landscapes at temple gardens by Buddhist priests, so that dwarfing of trees and shrubs became a necessity, copying the true landscape and giving the impression a real one conveys.
