It's Your Nerves:

It's the Condition of Your Nerves That Either Makes Your Life a Round of Pleasure or a Useless Burden

To many women life is one round of sickness, weakness and ill health. To attempt even the lightest household duties fatigues them. Many of the symptoms accompanying this state of decline are: a feeling of tiredness of decline are: a feeling of tiredness waking, faintness, dizziness, sinking feeling, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, loss of appetite, cold hands and feet, headache, dark circles under the eyes, pain in the back and side and all other accompaniments of a run down and weakene dconsti-

All these symptoms and conditions are simply the result of a poor quality and defective circulation of the blood, with a wasting away of the nerve forces. By feeding the system with

Reason Enough. The quality of a man's work depends greatly upon the mood in which he does it, and his mood, in turn, is influenced more or less sensibly by his surroundings. An anecdote borrowed from the New York Sun shows how true this is, even in so prosaic a place as a thread factory.

A party of women once had the privilege of inspecting a factory devoted to the manufacture of spool thread. Their cicerone was the proprietor of the factory, one of the largest and most complete in the world.

What most impressed the visitors, however, was not the size and evident prosperity of the plant, but the beauty of the place. Not only was every hygienic and commercial comfort attended to, but so far as possible every aesthetic consideration was observed as well. Around each wall of the spaclous, well-windowed apar ments where the work was done ran a broad, exquisthe work was cone ran a broad, exquisitely painted frieze. The figures upon the frieze were a dainty dancing company, beautiful in color as well as in form, and fit to grace the walls of a dwelling rather than a mill.

Finally one of the women, a practical, plain-spoken dame, asked the owner why he made beauty such an

"I don't see the use of a frieze like that in a factory," she said, bluntly. "Why do you have it?"
The mill-owner smiled. "Well, come to think of it, it is a very practical reason," he said. "I find that it makes better thread."

Mr. Hardup sighed. "I am in no position to be dictatorial," he answered. "However, I am quite willing to lay before him a few requests." From this brief conversation the as-

TETTER ON HANDS CURED

I had been troubled with tetter for several years. Attimes my hands would be sore all over, so that I could not use them at all, and were so tender that clear water, even, smarted like fire, and it spread over arms, neck, and face. I had been treated by physicians, but without benefit, when I began the Curicura remedies. I found relief before I had taken the fire bottle. I used three or four bottles of Curicura RESOLVENT, one cake of Curicura Contument, and it has never troubled me since.

What a splendid type of tireless activity is the sun as the psalmist describes it issuing like a" bridegroom from his chamber and rejoicing like a strong man to run a race." Every man ought to rise in the morning refreshed by slumber and renewed by rest, eager for the struggle of the day. But how rarely this is so. Most people rise still unrefreshed, and dreading the strain of the day's labors. The cause of this is deficient vitality and behind this lies a deficient supply of What a splendid type of tireless ac behind this lies a deficient supply of pure, rich blood, and an inadequate nourishment of the body. There is nothing that will give a man strength and energy as will Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It does this by increasing the quantity and quality of the blood supply. This nourished the nerves, feeds the brain, builds up enfeebled organs, and gives that sense of strength and rever which makes feebled organs, and gives that sense of strength and power which makes the struggle of life a joy. TEXAS RATTLESNAKE BITE.

How It Felt to Frank Kent, Who Was

How does it feel to be bitten by a rattlesnake? A vivid description of the sensation has been given by Frank Kent, an intelligent "snake charmer," whose untoward adventure has thrilled San Francisco with horror.

Kent had come to the end of his performance at a place of amusement formance at a place of amusement called the Chutes. He had handled all his snakes save one—a huge Texas rat-tler with which he was unfamiliar, having received it by express only that

Some one in the crowd dared him to pick up the newcomer. Lying in a hos-pital next day, with his arm swathed pital next day, with his arm swathed in lint, the performer said:

"I was very foolish to heed that remark, but it made me mad, and I grabbed up the new rattler. In doing this I falled to handle him as carefully as I should, and in an instant he whirled his head about and sank his fangs into my right hand.

"I feit a sharp sting, and instantly the hand grew unbearably hot. I dropped the snake as promptly as I dropped the snake as promptly as I could, and grasped my right wrist with the other hand, in order to shut off the circulation if possible. Then I sucked the wound as well as I could and made for the hospital. "In a few minutes it seemed to me that I would have to run a race with somebody, for a terrible desire overtook me to move about rapidly. I felt that some awful thing was just after me, and in this hysterical moment I could exercise neither judgment nor will power. Soon afterward I felt drowsy and stupefied, yet afraid to go to sleep, for fear that I would never awaken. "As the right arm began to swell it felt as though the skin had been stretched to the utmost, and was being fearfully strained. I endured all sorts of agony in this, and even now that continues, aithough, of course, I am not suffering as I was at one time.

Kent's life was saved with permanganate of potash, administered hypoermically.

Last Wooden Kai'r ad Broken Up. Capital is about to reopen the Clif-on iton mines in Northern New York, and to destroy the famous wooden raiload which used to bring out the ore. There's hardly anything a Yankee with an Irish name cannot invent. When the Clifton mine project was being discussed, the investors objected to the cost of building twenty-eight miles of sour railroad through a very rough country to bring out the ore.
"Eteel rails cost money," said the chairman. "Sure, an' why not make wooden sure, an way not make woden mails then?" said Jim Sheridan, the ang of Chifton," "they's wood enough up on hills to break a man's heart."

"Can you build a wooden railroad fit to run a little dummy engine on and a train of tip-cars?"

And Sheridan did. The rails were spruce poles, squared in the little "one-man" saw mill of the place, while log ties, half buried in the earth and staked down at either end were notched to receive them. Into these notches the rails were wedged firmly by two oaken keys sawed out in the saw mill. These keys had a way of shrinking during a dry spell, and working loose, when it became the duty of the engineer to keep a sharp watch for them and of the brakemen to dismount upon hearing three short whistles and a long one, and with a supply of keys from a keg which was carried on the conduc-tor's flat car at the rear to maul the rail tight again with a wooden beetle.

The engine used to run off the track into the bushes, when it was the pleas-ant duty of the trainmen to get off and pry it back into place again. Just as the railroad was becoming famous the iron works burned up. The railroad didn't burn. It's there yet, much of it, rotted into the ground, but it will have to come up to make way for a steel successor not half so interesting.

How Foxes Get Rid of Fleas. By an old hunter and naturalist of local repute a story has been told here confirming as absolutely true and trustworthy the published account, which has had few believers until now, of how foxes rid themselves of fleas. The fox, according to the book narrative, simply backs slowly into a stream water with a portion of the pelt of a rabbit in his mouth after the fox has made a meal of the rabbit. The water drives the fleas first up the fox's legs and then toward his head, and finally out on the piece of rabbit for, and then the fox drops the fur and his pests are done for. The local hunter and naturalist referred to, strange to say, had never heard or read this story when he told of the actions of a fox which he observed the other day in the waters of the Patapsco River. The little animal, he stated, backed into the river slowly with so much deliberation that he wondered what it heant. It carried some-thing he did not know what in its mouth and dropped the scmething when out in deep water. Then the fox hurried away. The object left floated near to the observer and he hauled it ashore with a stick. Fleas literally swarmed through the object, which was found to be a bit of raw rabbit fur. The observer had a puzzling mystery explained to him. He says his admiration for the shrewdness of the fox grows more and more as he grows older and learns his ways .- From the Baltimore Sun.

Remarkable Old Age. Dr. Edward Palmer of the Smithsonian Institution states that there is a wo-man in California 140 years old, whom man in California 140 years old, whom he has seen carry six great watermelons on her shoulder, done up in a blanket, for over two miles. There are now living on the island of Sappho, in the Mediterranean, three men, aged respectively 115, 119 and 126, who are obliged to earn their bread by manual labor. Thus they have abundant means labor. Thus they have abundant means of prolonging their lives. Exercise only will insure a man an active, healthy old age.

If, however, one is by feebleness of indoor occupation debarred from much exercise, he can greatly prolong his life by limiting severely the amount of hearty food he eats, thus giving his stomach less to do.
