not allow him to have his wife appear in public. The manager then broke the contract.

At the Savoy Theatre.

This week's bill at the Savoy Theatre shows no bad effects of the alleged vaudeville merger and the management delivered "the goods" at the opening performances yesterday, and there were large audiences present to accept the offerings. An excellent bill was presented and everybody was pleased, from the occupants of the box office right up to the gods in the gallery. The bill is nicely varied and there are acts to please all tastes.

The most sensational stunt on the bill was provided by the Four Lukens, who did a casting act. Their work was marvellous. Unlike most aerial artists who do the casting turn, they used full-grown men instead of children, for hurling through the air. Hanging by their feet two of the artists throw their mates from one to the other the "flying men" do a double somersault en route. The feat is thrilling in the extreme, and was loudly applauded. No act so daring has been seen at the Merrick street play house before.

Simon, Gardner & Co., late of Europe, presented a screaming farce entitled "The New Coachman." There are four people in the company, and the scene of the play is a college man's room in New York hotel. There are most absurd and amusing situations in the piece, and the fun is fast and furious.

Kenny and Hollis, "College Boys," did a very laughable song and dance act that went well. There was a lot of originality about their turn.

Dick and Alice McAvoy appeared in a Bowersky sketch entitled "The Kids of Hogan's Alley." They sang nicely and got off a lot of new jokes about the east side of Gotham. The act was nicely staged and made a hit.

Robin, the tramp juggler, did some very clever tricks and the melody of the act would make it go anywhere.

The Reid Duo did a pleasing acrobatic dancing stunt and worked hard all the time.

Mary Hollis, a charming soubrette, sang herself into favor, being recalled two or three times.

Frozini, the Wizard of the Accordion, an old favorite here, played several selections in his own inimitable way, and delighted the audience.

New moving pictures brought the excellent bill to a close.

No "Fig Leaf" Dress.

New York Telegram: Just as a gentle hint to the enthusiasts who are preparing to buy up all the front seats during the New York theatre this week it is just as well to break the news that although this dainty French chausseuse and blouse (just like that) will appear in living pictures she will not stick too closely to the style of costume affected by her famous apple-loving maternal ancestor.

About "The Burgomaster."

W. P. Cullen has made a big revival of Pixley & Luder's famous musical comedy success, "The Burgomaster," and will present it at the Grand on Saturday, matinee and night, with a large cast, headed by Gus Weinburg and Ruth White.

These two sterling players are the originals in the roles of the genial old Peter Stuyvesant, burgomaster of New Amsterdam, and Willie, the gay youth who leads the governor around New York when he is re-incarnated. The company will number 50 people.

The music is of the singing and whistling variety, and it is said that more copies of The Tale of the Kangaroo, and I Love You, have been sold than any other songs brought out in musical comedies.

Miss White has written a new song, words and music, which she will introduce in the first act.

Seats will be on sale Thursday morning.

Lawrence D'Orsay Coming.

Two unusually gifted stars, Cecilia Loftus and Lawrence D'Orsay, will make the production of "The Lancers" at the Grand Opera House, Tuesday, Nov. 26, an occasion of far more than ordinary interest.

It is not often nowadays that players as prominent as Miss Loftus and Mr. D'Orsay will submit to rivalry on the same stage, and when they will, as in this instance—and in a few others, such as that of Henry Miller and Margaret Anglin in "The Great Divide"—the theatre-going public is the gainer. The cast supporting Miss Loftus and Mr. D'Orsay is of the highest quality.

Offer to Countess.

Florence, Nov. 18.—Enrico Toselli, the Italian pianist, who, last September, was married to Countess Montignoso, divorced wife of King Frederick August of Saxony, recently received an offer to give a series of concerts in Warsaw, Russian Poland. He accepted, but when the condition was made that Signora Toselli should be present at his recitals Signor Toselli replied that his dignity will is one of the cleverest now before the public. It includes, the Misses Phoebe Coyne, Ellen Anglin, Grace Fisher, Suzanne Rusholme, Maud Rowland, and Doris Cameron, and the Messrs. Fred Tuler, Arthur B. Lawrence, Ben Field, Hubert Harben, A. H. Van Buren, Bertman, Allen and a chorus of thirty pretty girls.

Ladies Gave Operetta.

The Young Ladies' Social Society of St. Mary's Church played to a capacity house in St. Mary's hall last night when they presented the beautiful operetta "The Miracle of the Roses."

A fashionable crowd was present and the playlet was given in a finished style that speaks well of the young ladies and their teacher. The scene represents a number of young ladies who are attending a boarding school, enjoying an outing in the woods. Their time is occupied in picking flowers, singing and wandering through the woods. To break the monotony, the mistress of the school proposes a play and proposes the miracle of the roses, the legend of St. Elizabeth. St. Elizabeth was very charitable. Every day she fed the poor, and this against her husband's will. One day the king caught her as she was leaving the house with her shawl full of bread. In his anger he snatched the shawl from her, when to his surprise, he found it full of roses. The miracle changed him completely. He gave Elizabeth permission henceforth to perform all the charitable acts she wished un molested.

The cast of characters was as follows: Mistress of the school... Miss A. King Lady Clara (afterwards landlady)...

Graziella (a dumb girl)... Miss M. Kelly Madeline (a poor child)... Miss V. Hurley A Milkmaid... Miss A. Hurley Magnon (afterwards Elizabeth)...

Bertha (scholar)... Miss M. Doyle Alice (a scholar)... Miss M. Sheridan Jane (a scholar)... Miss A. Hurley Mary (a scholar)... Miss M. Hurley Flora (a scholar)... Miss M. Williams Anna (a scholar)... Miss C. O'Connor Tambourine girls—Misses M. Doyle, L. Smith, S. Cherrier and M. Fletcher.

During the presentation of the operetta a number of choruses were introduced which made a strong and decided hit, the songs were: "Through the Woods so Fair," "The Wild Rose," "Song of the Milk Drinkers," "To Heaven We Plead," "Thou Who Knowest Each Pang of Grief," "Privilege of Landlady," "Here Again My Fiege Anger Braving," "Little Madeline," "Praises Sing to the Lord of All."

Before and after the operetta a delightful treat was given in the shape of a musical program as follows: Piano solo—Selected. Miss E. Neilligan Chorus—The Maple Leaf Forever.

Members of Sodality Chorus—The Harp That Once Through Tara's Hall... Members of Sodality Solo—Angus McDonald. Miss May Smith Piano solo... Miss A. King Solo... Miss L. Phalen Piano solo... Miss A. King Solo... Miss M. Kelly Chorus—Estudiantina (a student's chorus).

Members of Sodality To-night the same production will be given.

Medal Presented.

Unique Feature at Methodist Church Tea Meeting.

The old-time anniversary tea meeting in Emerald Street Methodist Church last evening was well attended, and the ladies in charge of the tea deserve credit for the manner in which they prepared and served it. Mr. A. Vipond sang a solo, after which Rev. Mr. Williamson expressed his appreciation for being chosen chairman.

Mr. Adam Brown, President of the Royal Canadian Humane Society, was then introduced. Mr. Brown gave a description of the society's work. He explained that there was no organization in Canada to recognize Canadian bravery till the Royal Canadian Humane Society was formed in 1884. Since that time it has dealt with over 600 cases of bravery. The organization has a board of governors to investigate all cases of bravery, and that board had unanimously voted a medal to Rev. Dr. Williamson for his bravery in saving Miss Marjorie Butler, who fell off the Grimsby wharf. Mr. Brown in closing his address hoped that Mr. Williamson might be long spared to wear the medal, and then pinned it on his breast.

Dr. Williamson replied that he appreciated the medal awarded him, but when he rescued Miss Butler he was not thinking of reward, but of saving her life.

Addresses were given by Rev. B. J. Treleven, Rev. Dr. I. Tovel, Rev. R. Whiting and Rev. L. Couch, who made complimentary references to their gallant brother. The church male quartette rendered a selection, and the choir sang the closing anthem. Mr. Whiting closed with the benediction.

Clogged Wheels.

Miss Kearney Gave Able Temperance Address Last Evening.

Last night Zion Tabernacle was well filled to hear Miss Belle Kearney give one of her celebrated lectures on temperance. Her subject was "Clogged Wheels," having reference to the slow movement of the temperance society of late. She gave many reasons for this and said that one reason was poor legislation. This could be overcome, she explained, by freedom for the women and the right to vote. She launched forth on this subject in a clear and able manner which showed her to have a good understanding of the subject. Several other important reasons were also given. The lecture proved to be highly interesting and when Miss Kearney spoke to-night at St. John's Church she should have a capacity audience.

Examined a Mule's Feet.

Through a Joke Ringling Reinhardt, forty-five years old, of Warren street, Newark, is in the Newark City Hospital with a badly injured head. The physicians believe his skull is fractured and that he may die.

Practical jokers told Richmond the shoes on the hind feet of a mule were different, and when nobody was watching he went into the Essex stables at No. 64 Golden street to investigate. The mule didn't take kindly to the investigation and kicked Reinhardt squarely in the head. He was still unconscious when he reached the hospital.

TORONTO LOSES.

MUST PAY COST OF PROTECTING CROSSINGS.

Judicial Committee of City Council Has Dismissed Appeal From the Supreme Court—An Important Decision.

London, Nov. 18.—The judicial committee of the Privy Council has dismissed the appeal of the City of Toronto vs. C. P. R., and orders that the appellants pay the costs.

The Toronto Telegram, in a special cable from London, publishes the judgment in full. In part it says:

"In the present case it seems quite clear to their lordships that if, to use the language above quoted, the field were clear, the sections impugned do no more than provide reasonable means for safeguarding in common interest the public and railway, which is committed to the exclusive jurisdiction of the legislature which enacted them, and were, therefore, intra vires."

"If the precautions ordered are reasonably necessary, it is obvious that they must be paid for, and in view of their lordships' finding, there is nothing ultra vires in ancillary power conferred by section on the committee to make an equitable adjustment of expenses among persons interested."

"This legislation is clearly passed from a point of view more natural in a young and growing community interested in developing the resources of a vast territory as yet not fully settled than it is in a thickly populated area of such a country as England. To such a community it might well seem reasonable that those who derived special advantages from proximity of railway might bear a special share of the expenses of safeguarding it. Both the substantive and ancillary provisions are alike unreasonable and intra vires of the Dominion legislature, and on the principles above cited must prevail, even if these are legislation intra vires of the provincial legislature dealing with the same subject matter, and in some sense inconsistent. But it seems to their lordships that in truth there is no real inconsistency, and both stand together. The through railway is a subject matter excepted out of the jurisdiction of the province, and there is no express provision in the British North America Act denying the jurisdiction of a province inconsistent with the right vested in the Dominion to provide for safeguarding of the subject matter thus excluded from the jurisdiction of the province."

"The jurisdiction conferred over property and civil rights in the province is a subject matter not within the jurisdiction of a province."

The High Court of Canada directed that the city and railway companies do not prosecute any suit for protecting the railway crossings at Avenue road, Dufferin and Bathurst (north) streets. The immediate effect of the judgment is that the city must pay a bill of $4,677.11, its share of protecting the crossings from Dec. 31, 1901, to March 31, 1906.

It also means that the city must pay

LOOKS LIKE SUICIDE.

Cornelius Van Diemen Killed at St. John, N. B.

St. John, N. B., Nov. 18.—Cornelius Van Diemen, of Kansas City, who, with his brother, Benjamin, has been here since Saturday selling patent medicine, was killed by an Intercolonial train about 9.15 to-night near this city. He was lying on the track when seen by the engineer of the train, then two car lengths away. He was dragged by the engine and was dead when taken out. Benjamin Van Diemen, who identified the body, said they had been drinking, and had a dispute early today, and his brother had left his company. He said he had been searching for him to-night.

Mail Destroyed at Moor Lake.

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—The Post Office Department estimates that between 10,000 and 15,000 letters and 150 registered packages were destroyed through the burning of the mail car in the railway wreck of Friday last at Moorlake.

Trade returns for the last seven months show a total of $381,623,314.

DIARY WAS STOLEN.

ITS OWNER GIVES EVIDENCE IN THE DRUCE MYSTERY.

Robert C. Caldwell Tells That the Duke of Portland, Wearing the Druce Whiskers, Was at Baker Street Just Before the Bogus Funeral.

London, Nov. 18.—The venue in the Druce case, involving the claim to the Duke of Portland's estates, was transferred from the Marylebone to the Clerkenwell Police Court to-day. Robt. C. Caldwell, of New York, who continued his testimony, made the somewhat astonishing statement that the fifth Duke of Portland, wearing the whiskers in which he is said to have disguised himself as the late Thomas Charles Druce, was walking about the Baker street bazaar talking to residents just before the coffin supposed to hold Druce's body left the premises.

Miss Mary Robinson, said to be the daughter of a southern planter, testified that the diary which figures in the case was stolen from her in the street on Nov. 2.

The Magistrate was informed that a certified copy of the diary had been taken by counsel before the book was lost.

Continuing, Miss Robinson said she was introduced to T. G. Druce, whom she also knew as Welback, and later as the Duke of Portland. The case was again adjourned.

LAURIE'S WORK

Shows Business Capacity, Imagination and Courage.

London, Nov. 18.—The Morning Post, commenting on the prophecy of its Toronto correspondent that five years hence Mr. R. L. Borden would be Premier of Canada, though he lacks the picturesque qualities of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, asks: "Is Sir Wilfrid destined to leave his great work unfinished? Certainly," it says, "no other statesman could have accomplished so much in the short space of a lifetime as the great French-Canadian, who combines an imaginative eloquence unsurpassed in British history with the charm and courtesy of a cultivated Frenchman. In addition to the preference, the Imperial penny postage, the Pacific cable partnership, and the recent postal reform must all be placed to the credit of the Laurier Administration; measures wherein a business capacity was not less necessary than imagination and courage." The Morning Post's correspondent thinks Mr. Borden would adopt an attitude on the Imperial conference similar to Premier Deakin's.
