

Filling the Gaps.

The Regimental Recruiting Roster.

The Motherland called, he was ready to answer, he shouldered his rifle and glad of the chance to stand in the ranks of the khaki clad legions, he crossed over the Channel to "Somewhere in France."

He died, and you live the way from the turmoil, the clashing of arms, the strike of his lone grave in the shade of the elms, he is calling to you SONNY "Somewhere in France."

Are his pleadings in vain? Unwilling shall his death be! A thousand times he'll to the fight! A forward to victory! On! on! forward to glory! On! on! STAND IN HIS PLACE, SONNY "Somewhere in France."

—V. Margaret Doyle.

To the Mothers.

Ours are the fields that ripened for the harvest.
Ours are the ways that they but lately trod.
They that walk in light through ways yet unbeholden,
The early golden grain is in the granaries of God.

Re-Inforcements!

The Secretary of State in his message to the Dominions Calling for re-inforcements said that the last man sent from the Overseas Dominions might count in winning the war.

This is Newfoundland's great hour. What if that man should prove to be a Newfoundlander?

Four years ago we were a people little known to the world. To-day, thanks to the deeds of the Regiment and our Sailors, we are spoken of everywhere with respect and as a people marked out for greatness.

Our Sign and Standard-bearer is the Regiment—the symbol of our strength in the World. It must be maintained till the end.

If the Government enacts a measure of Selective Conscription all men who have served or volunteered will support the principle. It is the fairest and surest way to keep up the Regiment. No man whose duties to others require his presence here will be called upon to go. An impartial tribunal will recognize his obligations. The men called upon to serve will be doing the country's work and will have the country's respect, and the re-inforcements needed will be assured until the end of the war.

(Signed) THE SOLDIERS and THE REJECTED MEN.

St. John's, April 22, 1918.
