TRINITY.

The annual meeting of St. Paul's congregation, Church of England, was held in the Parish Hall, on Monday evening, January 17th. The Rector presiding. The meeting was well attended, and was in every respect representative, and a practical interest was shown in the business of the meeting. The churchwarden's report showed the Rector's statement in full. The offerings of St. Paul's congregation for church expenses were more than equal to the necessary requirements; and those offerings, together with the offerings for the missionary purposes and other purposes, amounted to over $500, thus making the total of the year about $1,900, which is an average of a little more than $100 from every man, woman and child in the parish.

There has been, however, a slight falling off in the offerings for missionary purposes. This is always the case for the first great object of the church as a body, and of every individual person as an individual, is a missionary work. With the inauguration of the Budget scheme next year, it is hoped that any leakage in this direction will be stopped. We must never forget, that the congregation, parish, or diocese, that loses interest in missionary work, and all other self-interests, is doomed to decay and failure. In spiritual life, the willingness is the dry rot of spiritual life.

The Church Wardens and Vestry met on Monday evening, January 18th, at 8 o'clock, and were presided over by Mr. J. H. White, who was elected to the position of churchwarden for the year 1921. The suggestion to erect a new bell in the church tower or to install a local plant, provide the church with electric light, was well received, and has been referred to a committee to consider, and to report at an adjourned meeting in February. Other matters relating to the welfare of the church and congregation were amicably and intelligently discussed and disposed of.

The Church Registers for the year 1920 show 1,247 members of the church in the parish; with 650 communicants, 83 baptisms, 18 marriages, 44 burials. There are 7 churches in the parish, and 14 day schools under Church management. Public worship every Sunday morning and evening in all the churches.

Churches, and by appointment regularly once a Sunday in the School Chapel, conducted either by the rector, or by one of the 12 Licensed Lay Readers of the parish.

The report of Mr. W. W. White, Secretary of St. Paul's Cemetery Committee, was (as the Secretary pointed out) the best report that it has been his privilege to submit for the last eight years. There is a credit balance of $155.38. The Cemetery fences are in good repair; the graves are being well looked after; and the Cemetery surface, as a whole, is being reverently cared for, as God's Acre should be.

The Mortuary Chapel is becoming yearly more and more, a silent witness to the Church's teaching of the brighter side of death, and the mutual relations that still exist between the faithful living and the faithful departed. The Chapel is always reverently cared for and kept in good condition. This year will see the set of windows completed in loving memory of the Church's seldier boys at rest. In addition to this, the outside of the building will receive all the necessary repairs and painting. At the next meeting of the Select Vestry, permission will be asked by Canon Lockyer, in behalf of a parishioner, to substitute an oak Altar, and Reredos, and a brass Altar Cross, in place of those of poorer material, such as are now doing duty there. This will cost between $200 and $300, and will be offered to the glory of God, and in loving memory of one now at rest; but who, when with us was one of the Church's most faithful sons.

Eternity alone will reveal all the good that such offerings have done, not only in the beautifying of this building—sanctified by so many sad and sacred memories—and the reminding us all of the duties to souls at rest; but also such offerings are becoming more and more effectively suggestive of delightful ways of helping to extend God's glory, by means of the money—more or less—which God has entrusted his people with. It would, I am sure, be pleasing to God, helpful to us, and full of reflected blessings to the givers, if those who once lived in Trinity, and who have loved ones laid to rest in the cemetery, would occasionally send an offering, either to the rector, or to the Secretary of the Cemetery Committee, to be used to beautify the Mortuary Chapel.

Miss Nellie Pearcey, who has been living in St. John's during the last year, returned last week to live for awhile with Mr. and Mrs. Morell. We missed you Nellie. Welcome home.

In my outline history of the "Trinity Mutual Marine Insurance Co., as given in the issue of January 18th, I am supposed to be responsible for the statement: "The Company was organized by Mr. Morris and Mr. B. Miller in 1775." I intended to write 1885; but perhaps I did not.

Mr. Johnson Gover of Bell Island is spending a vacation in Trinity and is visiting his sister, Mrs. Geo. Bartlett.

Mr. Ambrose Clark, wife and child, were passengers from Newtown, B.B., by the Prospero to Trinity, on their way to Dunfield.

By the courtesy of the Customs officer at Trinity, I have been shown two war ribbons, awarded by the King and issued to the men of the Mercantile Marine, who sailed safely to their ports of destination during the war, at the time of the German submarine blockade. One of the ribbons is that known as The British War Medal.

Ribbon, and the other is, The Mercantile Marine Medal Ribbon. Those ribbons, in possession of the Customs Department here, are for Mr. Abraham James, Spaniard's Cove, T.B.; Mr. John Sinclair, Smith's Sound, T.B.; Mr. Thomas Flander, Trinity, and Mr. Anthony Lahey, Trinity. The ribbon is one and a quarter inch wide. One is red and green, with a narrow stripe of white between. The other is burnt orange flanked with narrow stripes of white, black, and light blue, on either side. They are to be worn on the left breast with or without the medal, and, like all other such decorations, they may not be worn without official authority.

Mr. Nelson W. Pittman of the Western Union Telegraph Staff, New York City, came last week, and will spend his winter vacation in Trinity. Glad to see you, sir.

Mrs. Duder returned to St. John's last week.

I found an old Manuscript Book last week, and seeing the date 1783 on the first page, I concluded that I had a diary of ye olden times, that would supply me with material for some interesting articles. Upon closer examination, however, I am somewhat disappointed, as I find it is largely an account book of one Thomas Dampier, who in 1783 was Quarter Master Sergeant in the Newfoundland Regiment, stationed at Fort William, St. John's. From it I find, the officer in command of the Regiment at that time was Colonel Pringle; and Capt. Right was in charge of the Royal Artillery.

As Quarter Master Sergeant, Mr. Dampier had charge of the regimental clothing and stores; and his accounts deal exclusively with the distribution and the accounting for, of clothing, powder, etc., to the soldiers of the Regiment. There is not much of any other information of interest in Mr. Dampier's records. An isolated note, however, records the following event:—"St. John's, Fort William, Sept. 30th, 1783. The Guard of Fort William of the Newfoundland Regiment was relieved by the 37th Regiment, with one Sergeant, one Captain, and twelve privates, commanded by Captain Nicholas, arrived from New York, being part of the two Regiments Forty-eight Rank and file, with Non-Commissioned officers, drums and fifes, proportioned accordingly."

Mr. Dampier's history would not interest us very much, were it not for the fact, that in 1784, he being honourably discharged from the army with a pension, came to Trinity to live. He bought the house that stood on the present site of Mr. Somerton's house; and in addition to carrying on "a general business" of that day, he provided board and lodging for officers and soldiers who made Trinity their headquarters for several years. Mention is made of those soldiers going to Bay de Verde and to Perican and returning to Trinity. On October 27th, 1787, Thomas Dampier was married by Parson Clinch, to Anna Sweet. Two children were born to them, viz. Ann and John. Ann Dampier married (skipper) Thomas Jenkins, and became the mother of William Jenkins, whilst John Dampier married and settled at Goose Cove, Trinity; and the daughters of to-day in Goose Cove, are his lineal descendants. Mr. Dampier was vocally gifted as a musician, and when a song was called for in social gatherings, or a hymn was to be sung in the service of the Church, he was called upon to "rise the tune." He is still remembered in Trinity by the "Dampier" when one is called upon to lead in some ordinary undertaking of daily life. It may be interesting to know, that all the Dampiers of today are good singers.

Mr. George Gent and Mr. George Bartlett spent last week in camp, in the woods at the upper reaches of Trinity Pond. They report rabbits and foxes plentiful there, and they brought back a good supply of rabbit meat. This in itself is a luxury worth going for just now; but, of course, such things are only incidental of a trip of this kind at this time of year; when the many indescribable charms of the woods, and all that is included in "Camp life," constitute the thoroughness of enjoyment. Not many years ago deer were plentiful in that part of the country; but since the coming of the railway, etc., they have given it a wide berth.

Monday last being "Thanksgiving Day" was a Government and Bank Holiday. All the officials were thankful!

I am still trying hard to collect enough of interesting material for a weekly contribution, and to have it appear in the Saturday issue. I don't know, however, just how long I can manage to do it. Material at this time of year is getting scarcer all the time, which may prevent me from sending in something every week in the future. Then again, if I do send it, the uncertainties of winter mail delivery between this and St. John's will sometimes defeat my intentions for the Saturday issue. It has done so once already, and the mail that left Trinity on a Tuesday, did not get to St. John's till the following Sunday. Trinity, Jan. 29th. —W.J.L.

Interior Notes.

The firm of J. Clark and Brother has lately started shipbuilding at Penguin Arm, Bay of Islands. They will have one vessel of small size ready for launching in July next. We wish success to these industrious men who have the courage and energy to plan and carry out such an undertaking.

We have recently learned that Dr. Baggs of Millertown has been married. We wish him and his fair bride every success in their wedded life.

S.S. Lady Mary, owned by the A.N. D. Co., Millertown, has finished her trips up and down the lake. The ice is not yet frozen on the river and it is expected that it will be a long time before any traffic will be able to cross over the lake.

On Old Xmas night a number of prominent young ladies and gentlemen spent a very enjoyable time at the home of Mr. H. Riles of Millertown. Dancing was indulged in and to the tune of good music, lancers, quadrilles and two-steps occupied the time till the small hours of the morning. Amongst the invited party were Miss K. Fogwell, Miss Minnie and Susie Kelly, Miss Duff and Miss M. Whelan. The affair was a thorough success and as the time for retiring came, all thanked Mrs. Riles and Mr. Paquette for the entertainment.—COR. Millertown, Jan. 20, 1921.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

A TABOOED TOPIC.

"Death cannot long divide, For is it not as though the rose That climbed our garden wall Had blossomed on the other side?"

Once more I am going to dare to touch on what many people think is a gruesome subject, to be carefully avoided, and when mentioned, dealt with only by indirections such as "If anything ever should happen" or "Of course I shan't always be with you," et cetera.

I trust that will be sufficient warning so that those who cannot bear any mention of one of the biggest facts in our existence, will skip to another part of the paper and leave me talking with those who are interested in "the greatest adventure in life" as well as the lesser ones.

The thing that has impressed me today is the queer feeling that comes to one as one grows older and people one knows take to making the long journey. (There I am at the indirection, I suppose.)

One Expected Them to Live Forever. People one really knows, I mean, people of one's own age. Not just our friends, parents, or our teachers, or the man who kept the corner store, but our own schoolmates and other contemporaries whom, in the days when one was "a simple child that lightly draws its breath and feels its life in every limb," one expected to be immortal like oneself.

I can remember the little boy who sat across the aisle from me in primary school and who went home one day never to come back, far better than I can many of the other schoolmates who went all through the grammar school with me. He was a colorless child, but just because he was my first experience in the fact that it isn't only the old who die, he stands out unforgettably carved in memory.

The Beautiful Silver Lining.

A sad thought to bring unsolicited to your attention. Yes, in a way. But if one has any real belief in immortality (not just a lip belief) hasn't it a wonderful silver lining? I spoke the other day with a dear old lady who has just lost her daughter and has not many weeks to live herself.

"I'm just waiting for the call," she told me, "and sometimes I almost get impatient. You see there are so many more on the other side, waiting for me. There's my dear husband and there's my grandsons who went over in the war, and my little baby that I lost years ago and father and mother, and oh, ever so many more. If I ever get a little blue I think of them and how wonderful it is going to be to see them all."

A beautiful thought, is it not, to light of the valley of the shadow?
