Cottagers and Campers Have Enjoyable Farewell to Dr. and Mrs. Westland.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Port Stanley, July 36 .- The young people of Orchard Beach held a picnic yesterday in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Westland, who are returning to London after having summered here. The launch Ada May Bell was chartered for the occasion to bear the crowds to Port Talbot. There a bonfire corn roast was held. After supper the picnickers indulged in a corncob fight and a watermelon scrap. Although three, S. Morley, Dr. Westland and Ted Brown, were close seconds, Mr. McNight was unanimously declared the winner. On the way back, besides the enchantment of the moon and a special orchestra, the singing of the Misses Kathleen Smith, Joan Rowat, Margaret Purdom, Flossie Roche, Mary McLean Pauline Ward. Jean Campbell and Louise Norsworthy was very much ap-

The picnic was chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. George Morley, Mr. and Mrs. W. Greene and Mr. and Mrs. Kent Campbell. Many of the men who could not go by boat motored down. It was agreed that is was the best picnic ever. A huge fish—a sturgeon—floated in today in front of the casino. It measured between 41/2 and 5 feet in length, and was about a foot and a half high and one foot wide. It must have been hit by the propeller of a passing steamer and killed. Sturgeon are not very often found in the lake and this is an extra big one.

Doctor Preserved Silence. Since the fatal night when the young practitioner, but recently graduated from Queen's University, found that in the midnight silence of a little sleepy country town, he had a corpse on his hands for which he dared sign no death certificate, he preserved an utmust absolute calm. The working of his mind, in the light of the evidence submitted at the inquest, can clearly be traced. Alone in his large white ouse with a body to dispose of, he tried various means of accomplishing his gruesome purpose. He sought to cremate the body, hid it in a mattress rom which he had extracted blood soaked ticking. There it stayed, while police and neighbors took a cursory examination of the building, and finally, one night he interred it crudely in a ow roofed cellar, formed by a teanto There, until two days ago, it lay trampled in its shallow, unsuspected

Inquest Reopened. When the inquest was resumed this fternoon interest ran high, and the usual crowd sat tense and stiff, staring lankly at the scene. First of all, M. W. A wrist watch, too, was missing. Suspicions that might have ripened nto definite action have centered round Or. Robinson ever since the disappearance. But the people of Tamworth, buried in their pretty little town in hollow among rolling wooded hills, found it too difficult to believe that a tragedy of so sordid a nature could enter there. They saw and suspected, but could not bring themselves to believe. And Dr. Robinson exhibited such display of cold and callous indifference that the scale was turned in his
