reported to be anything but promising; but to counterbalance this the Western and Northwestern States will have the best yield in many years, and the full capacity of all the elevators at Duluth, Chicago and St. Paul will hardly be sufficient to meet orders already booked. Everywhere in the States "Annexation" is the burden of conversation. The Americans, strange to say, seem to think that Canada is a ripe cherry just ready to fall into their mouths, and the majority predict that the fruit will drop within ten years.
