FOREST FIRES IN QUEBEC

Pierce Fires Raging in Northern and Western Districts—Fighting Blaze.

Quebec, Oct. 3.—G. C. Piche, chief of the Forestry Department of the province of Quebec, declares this morning that the situation as regards forest fires is becoming more and more alarming.

Reports received this morning are to the effect that fires are raging in the northern and western districts, Temiscouing, Gatineau River, Haye River, at Huberdeau, near Lacurie, and along the railway lines. There are also fires in the eastern parts, as the fire fighting forces are busy at Oranborn, Watford, Dasquam and other sections of southern and eastern Quebec. These fighting forces have been doubled and Mr. Piche says that he is trying to get all the men he can to try and cut off the fires from other sections.

Small Army of Men Engaged.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—The direction of the wind having changed, the bush fires which have been raging for several days near Kazabawa were reported today to be somewhat less threatening than yesterday. However a small army of men is still engaged to keep the fire from spreading further in the direction of the town and lumbering mills and C. P. R. right of way.

Fires in Manitoba

Gilbert Plains, Oct. 3.—A big fire is raging in the Riding Mountains, southwest of this town, and is working rapidly east owing to prevailing west winds, it was reported here last night.

Forest Ranger Pollen, of Dauphin, and a gang of men have been fighting the fire for the past three days and reports last night indicated that they are holding it down. It is feared, however, that unless rain falls soon the fire may wipe out a good part of the fine poplar and spruce timber south of here. Another heavy fire was reported raging on Sunday north of Short Dale and St. Revell.

GUNMAN BROKE UP NIGHT PARTY

Masked Intruder Swooped Down on Merry Party at Midnight.

Swooping down on three girls and four men who were having a party last night at 61 City Hall avenue, a holdup man, masked and armed, lined up the revelers against a wall, forced one girl to search her friends, shot one man who moved, and escaped as the detectives battered in one door.

David Tomlinson, of Toronto, is the man who was shot. No one in the house knew he had actually been hit. One hour after the hold-up had wounded him, Tomlinson left the house, walked down to Craig street, took a street car to St. Lawrence boulevard, transferred, and walked into the General Hospital to report his injury. The bullet is still in his right arm, and his condition is serious.

The first intimation that the detectives had of the affair was at 10:15, when a woman's voice over the telephone said that a man with a revolver was threatening people.

Detectives Tourville, Bogli and Charrette rushed to the City Hall avenue house and found the place in an uproar, the inmates having just been released from an hour's ordeal they don't want to be repeated.

A party had been in progress. Three girls and four men comprised the party. All were in the front room except one man, Tomlinson, who was in the passage as an unknown, with a handkerchief over the lower part of his face and with a revolver in his hand, burst into the house.

"Hands up!" he shouted, and the party stopped.

The girls and fellows in the room heard a shot, then "Get inside here," came from the intruder. A second after Tomlinson walked from the passage into the room.

"Line up!" he commanded. All the girls he put on one side of the room, all the men on the other. Beckoning to one of the girls he shouted: "Search them." The girl went through the pockets of all her friends, but so far as the detectives could ascertain this morning, the man got little loot.

Her whole attention lasted almost an hour; during that time the revelers were standing with their hands in the air and their backs to the wall. When the operation was over, it was about 10:15 and at that time a woman got to the telephone and warned the police of the hold-up.

Evidently the intruder had some inkling of what was happening. Calling one of the women, and still pointing his gun at her, he ordered "Show me the way out."

LIVE ALLIGATORS IN PARCEL POST

Live Animals and Farm Stock Entitled to Mail Privileges.

Washington, Oct. 3.—A few bleary-eyed crocodiles a yard or so in length, whose digestion enables them to chew up broom handles as a man would a delicately carved tooth pick, may be "harmless" in the legal sense of the word when shipped parcel post, but Postmaster A. L. Benmyer of Cincinnati has his own personal doubt about the matter.

In addressing the National Association of Postmasters here, Mr. Benmyer explained that live animals and various kinds of barnyard stock, under the law, were entitled to mail privileges; if, in transit, they were bagged and labeled "harmless." Also, Mr. Benmyer appeared not to look with serenity upon the prospect some day of being obliged to "attend, water and feed various fowls and irritated live stock," as a part of the daily postal routine.

The Cincinnati postmaster is inclined to doubt that women postmasters or young women clerks in the home post office would look upon a crate of live mice as "harmless." Also, Mr. Benmyer appeared not to look with serenity upon the prospect some day of being obliged to "attend, water and feed various fowls and irritated live stock," as a part of the daily postal routine.

The evolution of the eggs, he said, was not so bad, explaining that first the parcel post handled crates of eggs, then the contents of such eggs after hatching, in the form of live chickens, only to be followed by fall grown chantrelles and domesticated hens. But when alligators and other gruesome creatures happen along in the run of business, and as was the case recently at an Ohio post office, escape from their crates and wallow about the office snapping broomsticks and otherwise giving vent to playful pranks until reduced to the official "harmless" stage, he declared it was about time to call a halt.

The convention failed to take any action upon the revelations of the Cincinnati postmaster, evidently feeling the "harmless" phase of parcel post management would in the proper course of events be corrected or modified by the postal authorities.

A CLEVER FRAUD IN LONDON

Crooks Get Diamond Ring Worth $300 Through Carefully Planned Scheme.

London, Oct. 3.—The devious ways of crooks appear to be so numerous that it is almost impossible to guard against them, and even the most cautious and experienced business men may be taken in by a trick that is new to him, or has new phases in it. The well-known jewelry firm, Mappin & Webb, who have shops in various parts of Europe and Canada, as well as in London, recently suffered the loss of a diamond ring valued at 300 pounds through a carefully-planned and successfully executed fraud which carried out at the Piccadilly Hotel.

A man who posed as "Mr. J. Bolman of New York," engaged a suite of rooms on the fourth floor of the Piccadilly Hotel. He slept there the night he engaged the suite, and next day he called at the Regent street premises of Mappin & Webb. He looked at a number of diamond rings, and asked for several to be sent down to the hotel for his wife to make her selection. The manager was not surprised. He sent one of the most experienced assistants of the firm and another employee to the hotel with the rings and they were warned not to permit the jewelry to go out of their sight.

At the hotel they were received by "Mr. Bolman" in his private sitting-room. He asked if he might take the rings across the corridor to the bedroom in which he said his wife was lying ill, at the same time nodding to the half-open door. Suspecting an old trick, the chief assistant promptly said that he was not at liberty to let any ring out of his sight until it was paid for. The man protested, but at last began examining the rings himself. He picked out one of the finest and then suddenly pushed the assistant away, dashed through the door and closed it.

Both men jumped after him, but when seized the door-knob it came off in his hands. The screw securing it to the central pin had been removed. They ran to the bell and found that the rings had been out. Then they tried the house telephone but got no answer, as it had been out of action. Finally they went to the window, and succeeded in extracting attention, but by this time they were too late.

There had not been any woman at the hotel with him. He had explained her absence to the hotel people the previous day by saying that she was following later with the luggage, and in that way had disarmed any doubts there might have been as to the genuine nature of his visit.

"A Terrible Experience"

"I Recall My Experiences with the Burglar with Feelings of Horror!"

"How would you feel if you were in the middle of the night with a flashlight shining in your eyes and the gruff voice of a man threatening that, 'If you make the slightest noise, I'll shoot?' That was my experience the end of last March when my husband was away in the woods and I was alone with my three children. Everytime I think of this experience a shudder passes over me and as long as I live I shall remember it. At the time I really thought I would die. It's a wonder my heart did not stop getting weaker and weaker, so much so that my husband and children were constantly worrying about me. Doctors prescribed for me and while I willingly tried their medicines, only very few of them did me any good, but unfortunately the good was not lasting. My family asked me if I would try Carnol and I said, 'I was willing to try anything,' but felt that I would not do me any good. Four bottles of Carnol taken regularly, has completely restored my former health and strength and, while I occasionally with feelings of horror, I am otherwise as well and strong as I have ever been. Carnol is the most wonderful preparation I have ever used for building and restoring health and strength. It has done wonders for several of my friends to whom I have recommended it." Mrs. McC. St. John.

Carnol is sold by your druggist and if you can conscientiously say, after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the supply bottle to him and he will refund your money.

POLICE EXPLAIN DEATH OF CROOK

Drug Addict Released From Jail When Heroin Cland Him As Victim.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—A clerk in the office of the Court of the King's Bench yesterday opened a bulky register and wrote "Fontaine deceased." It was the last chapter in the St. Denis street drug tragedy that sent the 19-year-old addict, Alfred Fontaine, to his death, and Youngs' 20-year-old mother-in-law to the penitentiary for five years for manslaughter.

"Dead," wrote the clerk on a thick court docket marked "Joseph Fontaine—death on the person." The coroner's investigation, however, determined that Joseph Fontaine, charged as a pick-pocket, was Alfred Fontaine the drug addict.

The cold black and white of the seep-looking docket revealed, too, that the lad, hauled at last from Boreaux jail on a Friday night to give evidence in a murder trial on the following Thursday, was lured by his craving for drugs to the St. Denis street drug party.

He was dead on the Tuesday—four days after leaving jail, and 86 hours before he was to testify in the Court of King's Bench in an effort to save his young friend, Wilfrid St. Onge, who is charged with the murder of Nestor Gopelovitch, Clark's street covier, on the night of April 1.

Awaiting Trial. Fontaine, under the name of "Joseph," was arrested early in June with a young fellow and a girl, and all three were charged with picking pockets, etc. He was arraigned and sent to Boreaux jail to await trial. Several efforts were made to get him out on bail, but they were unsuccessful.

At that morning 19-year-old St. Onge was fighting the charge against him that he was the leader among the gang of three who fired the shot that killed Nestor Gopelovitch during an escapade last April. St. Onge was in dire straits; a second member of the gang, Emile Trudeau, has hounded him as the one who shot took fatal effect. He was seeking an alibi. Fontaine was the man he was looking for—but Alfred Fontaine was his name.

ENTIRE FAMILY BURIED TO

Ten Members of Family Single Grave After Disaster.

Englehart, Ont. Oct. 10.—With a feeling almost awe the survivors of the disastrous forest fire watched yesterday afternoon the burial of Jack Marshall in the one wide grave with the neighbors he tried to save, the ten members of the Bond family.

Tragic in two days the citizens of this northern town have seen practically a whole family lowered into the grave together. Sunday 11-year-old Irene Marshall watched the burial of her father and mother and two brothers. Yesterday afternoon in the same cemetery 20-year-old Edgar Bond saw his father and mother and eight brothers and sisters buried together. Edgar Bond was saved because he was working at the farm of a neighbor, Abe Burville, in Armstrong Township. Desperately, fiercely, Edgar tried to reach his family, which was known as one whose aims were particularly devoted to each other, and his home and he was unable to save them.
