One great source of trouble and disease is the large amount of decayed animal and vegetable matter that is allowed to accumulate in back lanes and alleys.

The hot weather has dried up this decayed matter, and the strong winds carry it over city and town in all directions, when it is inhaled and swallowed by our citizens in their daily walks; it even enters our stores and dwellings.

To guard against dauger of this kind, let us sound a note of warning to every man and woman in Canada who does not enjoy perfect health and strength. Those who are weak, nervous, irritable and sleepless; as well as all who are alling from Dyspepsin and Indigestion are always the first to be attacked. Men and women who have sluggish circulation and impure blood stand on danger us ground and require immediate attention.

At this season of the year the public health should be as carefully looked after as at any other time.

Many of our aldermen and councillors in Canada believe that because the hot weather is over they are therefore at liberty to relax their efforts in the health department and rest quietly until next summer.

This is criminal negligence, and accounts in a large measure for the great amount of sickness that now exists. The cool autumn should be the healthlest season of the year in all the large towns and cities of Canada.
