Plant Breeding

Horticulturists who are interested in the production of new forms of plant life will find much that is interesting and of value to them in their work in Prof. L. H. Bailey's book entitled "Plant Breeding." Variation in its different phases is outlined. The influence of physical environment, food supply, climate, etc., are fully discussed. The production of new varieties and the most approved methods to be adopted in acquiring the qualities desired are fully taken up.

To more clearly explain the principles and discussions, concrete examples of work done with dewberries, blackberries, apples, beans, and cannas, are outlined. "There is nothing mysterious about the subject," says the professor, "so far as the cultivator is concerned. He simply sets his ideal, makes sure that it does not contradict any of the fundamental laws of the development of the plant with which he is to work, then patiently and persistently keeps at his task. He must have good judgment, skill, and inspiration, but he does not need genius." This book can be procured from THE CANADIAN HORTICULTURIST.
