

For sweet spontaneity, for Wordsworthian observation, for finished workmanship, for pure ideal tone, Mr. Lampman's verse will bear comparison with any produced by the men of this generation, here or elsewhere. One goes back to it with renewed pleasure. It is poetry which grows upon the reader, chiefly perhaps for its freedom from that terrible sécheresse de cœur which seems spreading everywhere like a blight.

SINCE our last issue two names have been added to the Guild—Rev's. George Miller, Edwin Smith.

THE graduating class of this year is small, numbering just half as many as last year, and considerably less than the year before. Their immediate future is generally uncertain. The graduates are:—Messrs. A. H. Campbell, J. R. Douglas, W. R. Foote, T. F. Irving, D. McRae, A. F. Rebb, and A. D. Stirling.

OUR esteemed Principal entertained the students of the second and third years, and other friends, on the evening of the 15th inst. at dinner. We appreciate the kindness of Dr. Pollok and rejoice with him over the prosperity of the College. At such gatherings "The College" is naturally the subject of the speech-makers. Drs. Pollok and Currie have experienced doubtful and depressing days, but better times have come, and no wonder they rejoice in the fruit of their labour. Our church owes a great debt to such men. Again Dr. Pollok has called forth a deep feeling of thankfulness from "his boys."

ON the 15th of February the professors and students were favoured with a rich treat in hearing addresses from two prominent clergymen of the Episcopal church on the subject of Jewish missions. Rev. Mr. Smith, who is Secretary of that department of the work carried on by the Church Missionary Society, spoke briefly of the history and general work of the Society. Rev. Mr. Fladd gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the religious tendencies and social position of the Jews before and since the beginning of the present century. Mr. Fladd is the son of a missionary and an Abyssinian by birth. Of late he has been engaged in mission work in Tunis.
