The Senate discussed the invitation to Göttingen at its last meeting. We learned that one of our senior Lecturers, who is a graduate of Göttingen, had already accepted privately an invitation to the bicentenary celebrations. We are therefore appointing him to represent the University and furnishing him with a short formal Address.

I am asked by the Principal of this University to say that at a recent meeting of Senatus the question of sending a delegate to Gottingen was considered and it was resolved to take action on very much the same lines as indicated in the resolution of the Senate of the University of Cambridge. Indeed, the Address to Gottingen has already been despatched.

Thank you for your letter of the 25th February about the invitations to Göttingen. Our Senatus considered the question at their last Meeting, and after some discussion decided that it was not a matter to be settled off-hand, and therefore postponed decision until their March Meeting.
