

at their departure from the place of their assembling. And when in the course of time this structure shall give place, as we trust it may, to one of umpler dimensions, may its history be invested with associations that shall cause its remembrance to abide with those who shall have then entered the "temple not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Father Almighty! hear thou our desires, and grant them fulfilment. To thee, in the name of thy dear Son, we consecrate these walls, these seats, this altar. Thine be the glory of their fresh beauty, and thine the richer glory of their decay!
