In order to save space I am finding it necessary to condense letters to some extent, and to omit, in many cases, the comment (generally frivolous), which it is customary for me to make. Readers are requested to read all letters carefully, including condensed replies, and not to be offended if I do not personally ask them to "call again." Says Indigestion Results From an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach which prevents complete digestion as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that Indigestion is caused by Hyper-acidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and bases which inflate the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and bases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. The pitch of the hemlock got into his hair and beard, and he tore his clothes on the big knots. And after kicking his long legs for some time and clawing the air and the bark with his hands, he finally got to the first limb of the tree.

Here he rested while he puffed to get his breath. He also had to wipe the blood from his bleeding hands. But the young Professor was sure he would learn all the secrets of the little Beavers. He took out his notebook to write all he had seen about the Beavers, but scratched his head and said aloud: "Why, I haven't seen a single Beaver yet, so I can't make any notes!"

When he put his notebook back irr his pocket he heard, as he thought, the loud report of several rifles. And the reports of the guns, in the still night, were so loud and sudden that he was startled and almost fell out of the tree. But he caught himself Just in time to save himself from a dangerous fail, and said: "Gracious! Who is that shooting?"

I presume you wish ideas now for new work. There is still a great deal to do for Serbian and Belgian relief; or you might undertake to aid the special hospital committee in looking after the sick soldiers here. Suppose, for instance, your club could donate a dozen fresh eggs now and then, or a dozen oranges, or some of those cooling-to-the-tongue white grapes, wouldn't that be worth while? Another way in which your members might like to work is to take a special interest in the Children's Aid Shelter here. The kiddies there need all the love and thoughtfulness possible, and if you wrote Mr. Joseph Sanders, the inspector, I'm sure he'd tell you just how your members could help best.

DECLINE IN PRICE OF LINENS UNLIKELY

in Spite of the Cessation of Hostilities.

TORONTO, Jan. 11 .- In spite of the cessation of hostilities, and consequently a curtallment in the demand on war account, there appears to be no likelihood of a decline in the price of linen goods for some time to come. Importers are having this fact brought home to them just now, this being the time when they begin to negotiate orders for linen goods for Christmas, 1919, trade.

"We are finding," remarked one importer today, "that the goods will cost us fully one-third more than a year ago, and manufacturers in Belfast are ago, and manufacturers in Belfast are not at all pressing us to book orders. You see," he explained, "the demand for linen for war purposes has been so heavy during the last three or four years that but a limited amount has been manufactured for ordinary commercial purposes. It will, therefore, be some time before conditions in the linen goods trade will again be back to normal. Until that period has been reached we cannot expect normal conreached we cannot expect normal conditions to obtain-in respect to prices.
