

Preface.

In presenting the first number of 'Nugent's Nova-Scotia Pocket Almanack' to the Public, the Proprietor has to apologise for the defects consequent on a first attempt: he trusts, however, that his endeavors to produce an original article worthy of patronage, and which embraces, in a small compass, much useful matter, part of which has never before been in print, will be appreciated by a discerning Public. In consequence of being obliged to adopt for our Calendar pages a larger type than was at first intended, the Chronological Table has been crowded out of its proper place, and appears as an appendix, although somewhat curtailed.

A small work like this, adapted to the pocket, and containing all the data wanted for every day transactions, connected with public business, must be found an acquisition here, as elsewhere. Wishing to bespeak favorable reception for his first essay, and anticipating several improvements for the future, the Proprietor submits his 'Pocket Almanack' to the discriminating judgment of his fellow countrymen.
