

SCHOOL SHOES

School Opens

School opening to-morrow the boys and girls will need new shoes. If ever they need good shoes it's for the fall opening—weather liable to change any moment. Keep their feet warm and comfortable—it's good policy in the end. We specialize on school shoes. They are our strong point. They have style, fit and wear.

Boys' School Boots - $1.00 up to $2.50
Girls' School Boots - 90c up to $2.00

Waterbury &amp; Rising Ltd.

King Street - Union Street - Mill Street

Take Seashore Snaps

You'd be surprised how much fun you can get out of it with a BROWNIE NUMBER TWO A-takes a perfect little picture 2 1/2 x 4 1/4 inches, and Costs You Only $3.00. EASTMAN FILMS ALWAYS ON HAND.

S. H. HAWKES - DRUGGIST - COR. MILL ST. & PARADISE ROW

ENGAGEMENT RINGS and BETROTHAL GIFTS

Our stock affords a wealth of suggestions for one about to purchase a gift of quality. One that will endure for a lifetime and in time become an heirloom.

These are the kind of goods that abound in Our Stock. Our reputation for "The Best" is ever sustained by the High Grade Goods which we make a point of securing.

Ferguson &amp; Page

Diamond Importers and Jewelers - King Street

Go To Jacobson &amp; Co.

For Your Furniture, Carpets, Oilcloths, Ladies' and Gents' Clothing at Prices and Terms That Will Suit You.

Jacobson & Co., 675 Main St.
Phone 1404-11

Chocolates, Mixtures, Creams, Caramels, and many other popular bulk goods. Package Goods, that you need, in great variety. Penny Goods, an unequalled assortment of rapid sellers. Pastry Ice Cream Cones, Etc.

EMERY BROS. Phone Main 1122, 82 Germain St.
WHOLESALE CONFECTIONERS

LOCAL NEWS

Special meeting of Pondsden and Rafter's Union on Wednesday night, Victoria street.

We've boys' shoes that were built for a career of hardship, 98c to $2.48, according to size. We'll sell them cash, corner Union and Brunswick.

CHURCH PICNIC
All aboard for the grand church picnic to be held at Black River Wednesday.

EDISON
Phonograph Records
For Cylinder Machines

The Edison People are now making Blue Amberol Records only for cylinder machines. We have still on hand a number of 2 and 4 minute Wax Records which we are selling cheap.

These will last only a short time longer and it will be your last opportunity to buy records of these styles. Any phonograph owner should take advantage of this opportunity and secure a number of these records.

2 Minute Wax Records
4 Minute Wax Records

W. H. THORNE & CO. LTD.
MARKET SQUARE & KING ST.

LOCAL NEWS

Chamber Girl Wanted - Dufferin Hotel. 329-8-28.
Today at Phillips' store, peppermint chews, 2 cents a pound.

J. M. Humphrey & Co. are staking their reputation on solid leather shoes made by them; every pair stamped "Humphrey's Solid" on the soles.

Go to Consumers' Coal Co., Ltd., for coal of quality. American and Scotch anthracite, soft coal, hardwood—209 Charlotte Street Extension; Phone M. 2670.

LABOR DAY PARADE
Spend Labor Day at home; greatest parade in the history of St. John; in the morning, garden party and sports; afternoon and evening, Barrack Green; admission free. 418-9-1.

BOOT REPAIRING
The birthplace of the guaranteed waterproof working, sporting and fishing boots, and the done-while-you-wait boot repairing system is at Brindle & Hills, successors to Steen Bros., 227 Union street. -A.

NEVER TOO LATE
Never too late to save your shoes no matter how worn. Our repair plant will turn 'em out perfect as new. Low charge. Trial solicited. D. Monahan, 82 Charlotte street. -A.

LABOR DAY PARADE
A meeting of committees from the different laboring organizations for the Labor Day parade, at Odd Fellows Hall, Thursday evening and full attendance is requested. 806-8-27

CONCERT TOMORROW
In Brussels street Baptist church to-morrow (Tuesday) evening Miss Ruth VanBuren, a student of Emerson College of Education, Boston, assisted by Alphonse Smith of West St. John, will give a concert which promises to be enjoyable; tickets 25 cents.

A NEW GARAGE
The new garage, Duke street, owned by The Empire Garage Co., is now open to do all kinds of repairs. It has good facilities for storing cars. The company is under the management of C. A. Norris and has secured the services of Fred Breen as mechanical superintendent.

UP RIVER NOTES
(From Our Own Correspondent)

There was wild excitement yesterday among the blue-jays in the wooded ravine traversed by a trout brook to the south of Chas. Parker's farm-house at Public Landing. The noise they made created quite a scandal in the neighborhood. It is not certain whether some young members of the flock had been caught picking berries on Summer Lake, or whether some of them had concealed themselves in the spruce trees near the pavilion on Saturday night while the dance was in progress, and undertook to give the rest of the family an aerial illustration of what they were up to. Whatever the cause, there was a great commotion, and blue-jays were chasing each other through the trees in the ravine above the orchard and back again, keeping up such a continuous scolding as to suggest that they had heard of some of the family quarrels Judge Ritchie is occasionally called upon to settle. The crows were still talking about it at daylight this morning, when sleepy suburbanites were rubbing their eyes preparatory to making connection with the summer ocean. The crows appear to have been greatly scandalized by the proceedings, but as the blue-jays disappeared the excitement was expected to subside during the day.

Speaking of trout brooks, a summer sojourner at the Landing went out after trout last week. He left instructions at the house that if he did not return, to take another man in a carriage he drove many miles, to a brook which was said to be the best for trout. It was necessary in the end, however, to cure a guide, and that cost a dollar. The guide found and fished the brook, with the result that five trout about four inches long were captured. Then they returned for the trout to be cooked for dinner. Over what happened when the four-inch wigglers were produced the veil of kindly charity is drawn.

There is a dog at Day's Landing which merits special mention in these notes. As the steamer Champlain was making this wharf on Saturday afternoon the wind carried away the hat of a man on the wharf. He threw a stone into the river close to the hat, and his dog went after it. The animal had a hard swim, and missed the hat the first time. It went back a second time and brought it safely ashore, amid the applause of the passengers.

Two members of the gull family were at the Landing yesterday for a short time. They were swimming to St. John after a visit to the lakes, and alighted in midstream opposite the Landing and to enjoy the scenery and rest after a hard fight with a strong head wind. One of them remained for some time after the other had taken wing again and disappeared beyond Craig's Point. It is believed that they had a quarrel about whether the new wharf at the Landing will stand the ice pressure next spring, or go out with the first run.

A bird that wore a plume and a generally top-of-the-line expression was pursued clear across the Parker farm and several others yesterday by a posse of smaller birds, who encouraged each other by constant boasting and by cutting circles in the air around the enemy. They took it out in bragging, however, and the tufted party made a clean get-away.

The whole country-side was scandalized last week by the going-on of a skunk, which apparently wanted somebody to start a ranch, and visited nearly every house to stir up interest in the project. A man who keeps chickens mistook the skunk's mission and killed it. A porcupine also having ambitions, no doubt visited one farmer, but was not encouraged to confine his tour, and forthwith took to the woods.

John D. Rockefeller Jr. tells a story of his father:
"Father tells many stories. Sometimes he tells a new one. Not long ago he related one to me that concerned a man who had inhibited rather too freely. The man in this condition fell into a watering trough. To the officer who came to help him out as he wallowed in the water he said:
"Officer, ken save self. You save women an' children."

This is Our Greatest Sale of Furniture Coverings and Portiere Materials

Highest-Grade Fabrics at Almost Unheard of Prices For Immediate Clearance...Plenty of Startling Bargains Still Available...Come Tuesday Morning and Inspect These Marvelous Values

MOQUETTE COVERINGS, 50 inches wide, in rich oriental designs and Persian stripe effects. These materials are of the very highest grade, practically unfadable, the most serviceable goods manufactured and good for at least twenty years of wear. Suitable for covering Turkish chairs, davenport, lounges, sofa beds, Morris chairs, divans, window seats, etc. Every yard is perfectly fresh. Study these princely reductions.

Moquette, regular price, yard $6.35, sale price, yard $1.25

Moquette, regular price, yard 3.00, sale price, yard 1.25

Moquette, regular price, yard 4.00, sale price, yard 1.25

MONASTERY CLOTH, all wool, this is one of the newest weaves, reversible, very effective for portieres and over curtains, in plain shades of green or brown.

Regular price, per yard $1.45, sale price, per yard 90 cents.

VELOURS for portieres, over curtains, table covers, etc., in shades of olive, bronze, rose, old rose, old gold and blue.

Regular price, per yard $1.35, sale price, per yard 75 cents.

REVERSIBLE VELOURS in rich terra cotta and olive shades, best quality.

Regular price, per yard $2.75, sale price, per yard $1.50.

Moquette, regular price, yard $4.50, sale price, yard $1.50

Moquette, regular price, yard 4.75, sale price, yard 1.50

Moquette, regular price, yard 3.60, sale price, yard 1.25

PORTIERE VELOURS, Tuscan shade, extra quality.

Regular price, per yard $1.75, sale price, per yard $1.00.

SILK PLUSH for portieres, etc., in handsome blue and green shades, 50 inches wide.

Regular price, per yard $4.50, sale price, per yard $2.50.

SILK TAPESTRY for covering furniture, also for over curtains. These are the very choicest silks we have and there is but a limited variety of them. All perfectly fresh.

Regular price, per yard $3.25, sale price, per yard $3.75.

HOUSE FURNISHING DEPARTMENT, SECOND FLOOR.

New Scotch and English Rugs

For Travelling, Motoring and Driving

To those persons interested in Rugs, this showing will be of more than passing interest because of its unusual magnitude and variety. When you consider quality and real worth an examination of our values will determine that prices are remarkably reasonable. Come and study these rugs while assortments are complete.

Wool Rugs, fringed ends, each $2.25 to $15.

Wool Rugs, cloth bound and stitched edges, each $2.25 to $15.

Wool Rugs, leather bound, each $9.50.

AUTOMOBILE TIRE TRUNKS at exceptionally low prices. The most reliable make on the market, all are covered with black enameled duck, well bound and neatly lined, brass hasp and padlock and catches. Three strong straps for fastening to shoes. Our special price, each $7.75. Fitted with Patent Arch for demountable rims, $9. With revolving door instead of hinges, $10.

A LARGE ASSORTMENT OF TRAVELLING REQUISITES
Trunks, Hand Bags, Suit Cases, Fitted Bags, etc. The most extensive showing in eastern Canada and, quality considered, we offer the best values obtainable. Examine our special Leather Suit Case at $4.50.

Men's Furnishings Department.

MANCHESTER ROBERTSON ALLISON, LIMITED.

THE WHIP A MAN OF MUCH IMPORTANCE

"Tay Pay" Writes of the Men in British House Who Keep Watch on Movements of Members To Ensure Presence When Needed

(Times' Special Correspondence)

London, Aug. 22.—It is always hard to understand how any member of parliament accepts the duty of a whip. It is a very important office and its duties are hard and almost menial. At the exit door of the inner lobby of the House of Commons there are two benches and either on or beside the benches there are the whips. The whips of the party in power, of course, have to be more regular in attendance than the whips of the opposition; the opposition may attend or not, but the ministerial party has always to keep its majority present because a defeat in the division may mean the end of the ministry. Occasionally, therefore, you see the bench of the opposition vacant, but never the bench of the ministerial party unless the business before the house is something in which the ministry is not interested; and where, therefore, it does not matter to it in which lobby the majority finds itself. The work has to be divided, of course; one whip takes an hour, then he is succeeded by the next, and so on throughout all the hours of the day and night. It is exactly like the service of the sentry outside the barracks.

The whip standing there surveys carefully every member who is leaving the house, and never allows one to pass, if he be a supporter of the government without asking him where he is going, or if he have paired, which, of course, makes his absence innocuous by killing a man and a vote for the time being on the other side; or the whip tells the member at what hours the division is expected and begs him to be back not later. The hour usually mentioned in the big debates is half-past ten and the division usually takes place between half past and eleven.

It will be seen that this is a laborious and as I have said, almost menial duty. It resembles, for all the world, the position of the porter who admits the visitor into the halls of the great. Why, then, do men take it? And why men in particular who apparently have everything the world has to bestow. I have seen the position held by Lord Derby before he went to the House of Lords; and when he was still Lord Stanley, Lord Derby dates back his family to distinguished positions for centuries; it figures conspicuously in Shakespeare, his old name of Stanley is in the most effective passage of Walter Scott's Marion. His possessions are gigantic, he owns the greater part of the land in some of the most prosperous towns which have grown up in Lancashire, and yet he was willing to discharge these menial duties.

The Reason

The secret is that everybody in England takes part in politics and prizes political distinction more than any other prize in the world. Unless a man have the ladder of official promotion slowly, and usually also has to begin at the bottom, and a whip is one who is kept up the ladder the first step on the official ladder.

There is another example at the present moment of the extraordinary value placed on this humble position. The chief whip of the Tory party, the Lord Edmund Talbot. He is the brother of the Duke of Norfolk, who stands in the first place among the English nobility. He is hereditary Earl Marshal which means that he has the right to superintend all the great functions of the sovereign; and anything else that calls the nation to a solemn manifestation.

The present Duke of Norfolk, a Protestantism. His brother is rich himself, has in his veins the blood of all the Howards, and yet he was very proud to get the office of chief whip to the Tory party.

Apart from the reason I have given, the chief whip is sufficiently important to justify almost any young politician in coveting the office. It is the chief whip of the Tory party, the Lord Edmund Talbot. He is the brother of the Duke of Norfolk, who stands in the first place among the English nobility. He is hereditary Earl Marshal which means that he has the right to superintend all the great functions of the sovereign; and anything else that calls the nation to a solemn manifestation.

Everybody knows, is an intensely devout Catholic and so an Irish member said, his eyes gleaming with triumph, that he had succeeded in getting permission to put candles around the coffin of Gladstone, the use of candles being still one of the fiercely controverted points between the different sections of the House of Commons.

He is, in his veins the blood of all the Howards, and yet he was very proud to get the office of chief whip to the Tory party. Apart from the reason I have given, the chief whip is sufficiently important to justify almost any young politician in coveting the office. It is the chief whip of the Tory party, the Lord Edmund Talbot. He is the brother of the Duke of Norfolk, who stands in the first place among the English nobility. He is hereditary Earl Marshal which means that he has the right to superintend all the great functions of the sovereign; and anything else that calls the nation to a solemn manifestation.

I have over and over again seen men coming to divisions who had to be taken through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies in bath chairs or leaning on the arms of their friends. One of the most regular attendants in the House of Commons today is James O'Keely, a veteran Irish member. He has been an invalid for many years, but by arrangement between the whips his vote is taken without his having to leave his seat. In the seventies there was in the House of Commons a strange figure in McMurrough Kavanagh. He was born without hands or feet, and through the lobbies