mind all the time in order to cover his own crimes."

He paused a moment to think. "Yes, then came the trouble. A big amount was missing—between two and three hundred pounds—and I had to put my foot down. It meant a good deal to me in those days. I carpeted everybody, and swore I would prosecute the lot unless the money was returned. It remember that Parmenter was out at the time, and Purvis suggested that to be me in the time, and Purvis suggested that to be me in the time, and Purvis suggested that to be persons of comparatively humble position, Five hundred representatives, Englishmen and Frenchmen and ladies, attended, including Senator Mascurand, chairman of the French Republican committee; Senator Fuere and many other French senators, deputies and business men.

Madame Laurier was unable to attend owing to a cold, but when Sir Wilfrid arrived in the course of the bandure of the persons of comparatively humble position, Five hundred representatives, Englishmen and Frenchmen and I ladies, attended, including Senator Mascurand, chairman of the French Republican committee; Senator Fuere and many other French senators, deputies and business men.

IRISH BILL GOES TO THE COMMONS

Long Awaited Measure Designed to Meet Demands for Irish Home Rule

Mr. Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in Explaining the Bill, Delivered Splendid Speech — Bill Criticised and Ridiculed by Mr. Balfour — John E. Redmond's Exposition of Ireland's Claims for Complete Home Rule.

today presented its long awaited Iris bill to the house of commons and the country. This bill is designed to me the demands for Irish home rule

The council would have the power to appoint or remove the officers of the eight departments mentioned above, but the rights of the existing officers would be preserved. Under the bill any British subject would be able to hold the office of lord lieutenant without preference for any religious belief. A clause was also included providing that no preference whatever shall be shown to any religious denomination in appointments and that any resulting from such preference shall be invalid. In conclusion Mr. Birrrell said:

"The government has been told that the bill paved the way for home rule. If the bill is passed and the new council is a success, then I dare say it might pave the way. If, on the other hand, it is a failure, it might present considerable objects, but surely the Unionists will not refuse Ireland an opportunity for training her people to acquire any right they ought to possess because if the measure prove successful, one of the difficulties in the way of home rule will have been removed."

Mr. Balfour, the opposition leader, Mr. Balfour, the opposition factor and excited the opposition of Ulster would be found supporting the measure which, he said had excited the opposition of the Ulster Unionists because they feared it would put an end to their reign of patronage. R. Barry, solicitor general for Ireland repudiated the suggestion that there had been a private treaty with the Nationalists in respect to this bill.

Mr. Balfour — John of Ircland's Claims for the heart of the measure would not legistimately relieve the aspirations of the Irish and would only cause confusion in the administration and entail real grievances on Scotland and England.

He declared that there was no object which was desired in connection with the government of Ireland which would be furthered by the extraordinary proposals of the Irish and which was desired in connection with the government of Ireland which would be furthered by the extraordinary proposals of the Irish and would only cause confusion in the administration and entail real grievances on Scotland and England.
