With a Frylog-Pan.

Mrs. Seton-Thompson, in her camping experiences, entitled 'A Woman Tender-foot,' confesses that in the beginning of her Rocky Mountain life she regarded rattlesnakes as only one kind of disagreeable reptile. She had not then caught the popular horror of them, and that is possibly the reason why she could despatch her first one with so much coolness. One day she was riding in advance of her husband.

She says:

Suddenly there came a noise like dried peas in a pod, and gliding across the road was a huge rattlesnake. Whiskers, my pony, performed a flank movement, so nearly unseating me that I deemed it expedient to drop to the ground; and Whiskers, without waiting for orders, galloped down the road.

The rattler stopped his pretty gliding motion away from me, and seemed in doubt.

'He is going to coil and then to strike,' said I, recalling a paragraph from my school reader.

I cast a despairing glance around, and saw, almost at my feet, half hidden by sage brush, several inches of rusty iron. Blest be the passing teamster who threw it there. I darted toward it and turned on the rattler, armed with the goodly remains of a frying pan.

The creature was ready for me, with darting tongue and flattened head. Another instant, and it would have sprung. Smash on its head went my valiant frying-pan and struck a deadly blow. I recaptured my weapon, and again it descended. The rattler was settled.

But oh that tail! that awful, writhing, lashing tail. I can stand Indians, bears, wolverines, anything but that tail; and a rattler is all tail except its head. The snake was really helpless, and I put one foot on him to take his scalp; that is to say, his rattles.

Then the uncanny thing began to wriggle and rattle with old-time vigor. Horrid thrills coursed through me; but fortified by the assurance that the existing rattler was a purely reflex neuroganglionic movement, I hardened my heart, and captured the 'pod of dried peas.'

Wilhelmina To the Rescue.

The little royal girl of Orange, who punished her dolls by making them queens, has always been democratic. One winter, when she was about twelve years old, she was driving with the queen mother in an open victoria through one of the narrow streets of The Hague. When they came upon two or three schoolboys snowballing some little girls.

Without a moment's hesitation Wilhelmina jumped out of the carriage, and ordered her youthful subjects to stop.

The boys did not recognize the voice of authority, nor their sovereign, and not only continued their sport, but turned it against the newcomer, pelting her with snowballs. She stood her ground, filled both hands with snow, and was about to return the charge, when a scandalized footman appeared.

'It is the queen whom you insult!' he said, in a terrible voice.

The boys slunk away, and Wilhelmina laid down her handful of snow, with a sigh. 'I do wish I could have thrown it at them!' she said.

Fly the Poor Rich.

Two ladies were discussing the spectacular existence of a very rich man.

'Yes, my dear,' said one, 'I knew him when he worked for Uncle Joe for three dollars a week. Of course that made fixed price for all millionaires who have made their money, and it does make one tired, but this is literally true. And now he has a house in New York, another at Newport, a farm on Long Island, an estate in Lenox and cottages at Tuxedo and Aiken, besides a yacht and a private car that is the apotheosis of leather and gilding.'

'Where is his home?' asked the other.

'Home? He hasn't any. When they get as rich as that they've no more home instinct than milk-cows.'

Thoughtful Husband.

Parting is hard to bear, and the young man who endeavors to soften its pang for his bride of a month certainly deserves commendation.

'And now that our honeymoon is over and we are settled in our own home, must you leave me for three whole days for the sake of business, Henry?' asked the clinging wife in a tone of reproach.

'I must, dear Mabel,' said the young husband; 'but to make the separation seem less abrupt, I am going on the accommodation train instead of the express.'

Too Much Money.

They were discussing in one of the committee-rooms at Washington the railway postal cars, which cost three thousand dollars each to build and two thousand dollars a year to maintain.

'The situation,' said one of the Congressmen, 'reminds me of the story of the pompous but somewhat insignificant lawyer who, in conversation with a judge, remarked: "It costs me six thousand dollars a year to live."

'The judge looked him over critically, leaned back in his chair and said:

'Bill, if I were you I wouldn't pay it! It ain't worth it.'

St. Vitus's

Dance, or chorea, is one of the most pitiable afflictions humanity is called on to endure. That this disease can be cured, however, is proven by the fact that it has been cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The tranquilizing effect upon the nerves exercised by this remarkable medicine is witnessed to by thousands who have found healing and strength in its use. It not only cures womanly diseases, but it promotes the health of the whole body. It is a nerve-feeding, strength-giving, sleep-inducing medicine. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

'Favorite Prescription' contains no alcohol and is entirely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics. It cannot disagree with the weakest or most delicate constitution.

'When our daughter Lizzie had St. Vitus's dance, I happened to get one of your small books and read it,' writes Henry L. Miller, Esq., of 1016 North 7th St., Burlington, Iowa. 'Among other things I found that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cured patients suffering from that trouble, so I went out and got a bottle. She was very bad at that time and could hardly talk. When I read about your medicine in that small book, I said to myself, with the help of God and that medicine we can cure our daughter. We did so. Four bottles of "Favorite Prescription" cured her, and I did not have to tell her the doctor any more. She is well, thank God and the "Favorite Prescription" for it.'
