FORMING $1,000,000 COMPANY TO EXTRACT PINE PRODUCTS

James Feinbrook of Chatham, Here Yesterday, Speaks of New Industry On the Miramichi-- National Rubber Company and Montreal Firms Interested--Will Employ 300 Men.

Mr. James Feinbrook of Chatham, was in the city yesterday and gave to the Standard some particulars concerning the new industry for the extraction of tar, turpentine, creosote, wood oils, alcohol and other products from pine stumps, tree tops, etc., which he has opened up on the Miramichi and which has unlimited possibilities.

Mr. Feinbrook now has 80 men at work erecting the plants to be used. The secret process by which the tar and turpentine are extracted was discovered by Mr. Feinbrook himself and is carried on by means of charring and distilling. The inventor is a man of long experience in the lumber business, having been born in the heart of the big timber districts on the Baltic, and was interested with his brothers in mills before coming to this country.

He conducted a small mill at Chatham successfully for some months but he has been engaged in preparatory work for the larger project for some years. An option on a large tract of land on Cain's River has been secured and boilers and plants will be erected at intervals of five miles. Only dry wood is used, and it is thus impossible that the young growth of the country will be impaired by the new industry. Norway Pine is the only wood handled, and in the Cain River district there are enough stumps and refuse to keep the distilleries going for some years.

Method of Manufacture. The large oven for charring has been completed at a cost of $6,000 and the distilling plant is also ready for use. A gooseneck pipe leads from the charring oven to a large cylinder tank, where distilling is going on. A longer pipe connects the cylinder with an oblong tank where cold water of pipe is in position. The finished product comes out in a pipe at the bottom of the last tank.

Mr. Feinbrook says that when he left, his men were engaged in building a boarding house for themselves. Several orders for tar and turpentine have already been placed with Mr. Feinbrook and he expects to be able to fill these orders soon. He returned to Chatham last evening.

WOOD OILS are used for coating floors, furniture, etc. A secret process by which the tar and turpentine are extracted was discovered by Mr. Feinbrook himself and is carried on by means of charring and distilling.
