CANADA AND THE MOTHERLAND.

The new relation in which Canada will stand toward the Motherland will be set out by Sir Robert Borden in his address to the House of Commons on Friday. The Imperial War Cabinet on which the Dominion was ably represented in London, recently, is to assemble annually and the statement of the Overseas Dominions are to have a full share in the development of the foreign policy of the Empire. The acceptance of that relation on the part of Canada and the other sister nations must, however, be purely voluntary, for nowhere in England is there manifestation of wish or desire to interfere in the least degree with the complete autonomy of any of the Dominions. A closer connection between Canada and the Motherland was fore-shadowed in Parliament by Sir Robert Borden on the occasion of his introduction of the naval aid bill. He then predicted that Canada would continue to exercise a larger voice in Imperial affairs. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and other Liberals objected to the idea, fearing that a closer relation might tend to undermine Canadian autonomy. This fear had no basis. The British Government is content that Canada shall always work out her own problems in her own way, but in recognition of the splendid share Canadians have borne in the world war the Government of the Mother Nation is more than willing that the Overseas Dominions shall have full voice in all matters of Imperial policy. In future the Empire will execute no treaty until Canada is consulted. There will be no war until the Dominions have placed upon it the seal of their approval, and have pledged their co-operation. The projected relation will bring to Canada and Canadians an added advantage and distinction, and from the proposed Inter-Empire commercial preference will come many tangible concessions that must prove of inestimable value to the industry and commerce of this Dominion. The great war has made heavy demands on Canada but these demands have been nobly met. It is likely to result in a more rapid development of the highest ideal of an Imperial Federation than could be achieved in half a century of peace. After this conflict has passed into history Canada will stand in a new relation to the Motherland. And there will be no sacrifice or surrender of Canadian autonomy.

THE CONSCRIPTION MEASURE.

Conscription in Canada is to be applied on the same lines as in England and it is not anticipated that any industry essential to the prosecution of the war, or the development of the country will suffer by the removing of our surplus male population for service in khaki. There are in Canada between 55,000 and 60,000 males between the ages of eighteen and forty who have no dependents and who are not engaged in essential employment. These will be taken first insofar as they are physically fit. Local boards will be created throughout the Dominion before which all males between the ages mentioned must enroll. Then the selection will be made and the men first taken will be those who can most easily be spared. That is eminently the fairest and most business-like system, even though it may lack some of the fancied advantages of voluntary enlistment. Under a voluntary system only the men who felt the call of duty donned the khaki. The others, the billiard hall habitués, the amusement house patrons, the corner loafers and the drawing room artists, were content to pursue their even course undisturbed by the thought that better men were bearing their burdens while they were reaping the temporary benefits of civil life in non-essential employment. Now these fit-figured gentlemen will be made to serve with the others, will be forced to do what they should have done of their own volition. There will be no injustice to any man. It is not the purpose of the measure to drag into uniform any man who is doing a more useful work in civil life. It is not intended to rob women and children of their breadwinners. But it will bring home to every one a deep realization of the fact that this is their affair, that they are as vitally concerned in its outcome as those who have borne the brunt of it for the past two years. That is the fair part of the plan. The man of value to Canada will be protected. The slacker will be compelled to "do his bit."

THE GRITS AND CONSCRIPTION.

Already some Liberal newspapers which, for months, have been crying "evidence of leadership" on the part of the Borden Government, are beginning to grade the conscription on Friday. They probably will not go so far as to openly declare against the proposal, but they are trying to create the impression that what they term "conscription of wealth" is more necessary than conscription of men. That is not the fact. Canada has been able to secure all the money required for her war expenditures and the last budget showed that her expenses for other purposes were so far inside the mark of her receipts that $80,000,000 could be carried over to the war funds. A people who will respond as readily as Canadians have responded to the call for funds with which to pay war expenses do not require to have their wealth taken from them by force. To intimate that such is the case is only childish subterfuge to evade the real issue. The need of the hour is men. Men for the armies, men for the fields, men for the mines and essential industries of Canada and it is this need the Government has set out to supply. Men will not be taken from the farms, or the mines, or the munition plants, or the other industries essential to the prosperity and well-being of the nation. The conscription proposal of the Canadian Premier has taken the Liberals by surprise. They fail to see the Imperial side of the question and, so far, have shown a disposition to consider it only from the political standpoint. A despatch from Ottawa is to the effect that Sir F. F. Pardee, chief Liberal whip, has been sent hurrying through Ontario to test opinion. Quebec, as expected, is likely to be solidly against a conscriptive measure. That is Laurier's only stronghold and, if, as now seems probable, the Liberal leader opposes conscription when the measure is formally introduced on Friday next, he is likely to find himself without the support of a large proportion of western Liberals, without Ontario, and with only a few of the more hardened Maritime partisans such as Carvell and Kye, prepared to put their politics ahead of their patriotism. Meanwhile it is of minor interest to observe that the Telegraph and Times have not made up their minds just where they stand on conscription. The course of those journals, published in the city of the Loyalists, will be watched with some curiosity.

FOOD WASTAGE. "The thing that has impressed me most unpleasantly since returning to Canada is the prodigality with which you are wasting food. In England we have been living with tightened belts for months." This striking statement by Dr. George R. Parkin, Imperial Commissioner of the Rhodes Scholarship Fund, should cause every man and woman who reads it to think seriously whether they are doing their full share to help win this war by helping to preserve the food supply for our boys overseas and for our gallant allies in arms. Canada has not yet felt the pinch of war except in the way of being forced to pay higher prices for articles of daily use. There has been no acute food shortage. A man can still buy all of any article he can pay for. In different parts of the Dominion the condition is lined the family pocketbook may be a limit is set upon the quantity of foods a householder can purchase and this ensures the widest possible distribution of available stocks. Although there is no food shortage in Canada yet that is no reason for waste, or prodigal expenditure, even on the part of those who can afford to buy and pay for any article of food they desire, and in any quantity. The old adage that a man is entitled to what he can pay for does not hold good in the face of a national necessity or an emergency present or prospective. Economy is always commendable and at no time more so than the present. Let Canadians remember that while most of them are still living in their accustomed style, and have made no attempt at retrenchment, the whole of Britain is practically on rations. A more general observance of the principle of economy is most desirable in the interests of Canada and of the Empire. Surely it is not too much to ask that while our sons and brothers are fighting our battles abroad, we, at home, shall do our utmost to "carry on" to the limit of our ability.

MT. ALLISON EXERCISES

"Pygmalion and Galatea" Admirably Presented Saturday Evening.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR COLLEGE HEROES

Dozen St. John People Already in Attendance for Festal Week.

Special to The Standard. Sackville, May 20.—Mount Allison closing exercises began most auspiciously Friday night with a reception in the Owen's Art Building. The attendance of students and friends of the institution was large. A good programme by students and the Sackville Citizens band was successfully carried out. Saturday afternoon the junior recital was given in Charles Fawcett Memorial Hall, the students acquitting themselves most admirably. The event of the day and perhaps the biggest thing in connection with the anniversary exercises for the year was the presentation of the Greek drama Pygmalion and Galatea by eight young lady students of the Mount Allison oratory department and the rendition of the exciting Greek musical pastoral composed by Prof. Fritz Read, head of Mount Allison Conservatory of Music. The programme was of exceptional interest and merit, being listened to with keen attention by a very large audience. The splendid work of the oratory students and the magnificent rendering of the pastoral elicited warm words of hearty appreciation from hundreds of visitors present.
