Returned to God who gave it. The dust lies here." Mr. Hiram Hyde is probably one of the most widely known men in connection with the early development of Nova Sco-ia now living.

The writer seldom hears a public speaker, in referring to his early experience in Nova Scotia, but who has something to ay of his adventures on "Hyde's caches." Mr. Hyde was always a man of noted firmness of character and indomiable will power and, when the question as first mocted as to mail service in was first mocred as to mail service in Nova Scotia, and the increasing passenger traffic of the '30's became a problem, "Old Hyde," as he now pleases to style aimself, came to the front and established the greatest coach roate from Halifax to Antigonish via Pictou, that Canada has er known under similar difficult creumtances. A government contract was re-ured and it is said Mr. Hyde made a rtune before he finished with coaching, was continuous. At certain stages after leaving Halifax fresh horses were stationed and almost locomotive speed was made along the rough and rugged roads. The legislative halls at Halifax soon found Mr. Hyde within their precincts an able advocate of every object that would further the advancement and development of the country. He was soon off "over the border" and became largely interested in the Standard Oil concern then coming to the light of the world for the first. Here, too, Mr. Hyde is credited with having turned an honest penny into another fortune. But with his broad and beral nature he soon passed it along to nother, and started again. Mr. Hyde

Truro and only a few years ago erected large buildings, put in railway sidings, and enablished one of the largest ceal and wood businesses in the town. About the same time he was appointed a delegate from Truro Board of Trade to the Maritime Board in session at St. John, where his arguments and speeches carried weight and were reported fully by the St. John press. Mr. Hyde has nearly reached the four score years and ten, but seems still energetic and active, though "not so young as he used to be." He has gone out of business, and his plant is new on the market. He superintended, in person, the inscribing of his own epitaph some weeks ago, and says "'twill not be long." It is understood generally that Mr. Hyde has a great aversion to eulogy and had the simple inscription made so

Toronto, Aug. 13.-Maurice Goldstein, a Jew, died here under peculiar circum-stances Saturday. The post mortem ex-amination revealed the fact that he had died of slow carbolic acid poisoning. Francie Helpert and Meyer Shapero are held as material witnesses on suspicion of causing Goldstein's death. A charge of murder has been laid by the crown against the two. Magistrate Denison remanded the prisoners today for one week. The crown is carefully piecing together the evidence which they claim will sustain the charge of murder.
