I was the first to reach the poor man and shocked at his appearance: he was on his knees with clothing disarranged, hands uncovered and frost-bitten, and a wild look in his eyes. Asked what was the matter, he replied with a slow speech that he didn't know, but thought he must have fainted. He showed every sign of complete collapse.

They stood by him to the last, there certainly imperiling their lives, and they must have perished there had he died. Now they left the glacier and ruck over the barrier ice to find the surface veritably appalling. The party of the expedition had begun on the 22nd of Scott made this entry: "There is little doubt we are in for a rotten critical time going home, and the lateness of the season may make it really serious."

On the 24th, came another misfortune, the South Barrier Depot they found shortage of oil, on which they depend for warmth. There has been much discussion of this failure, whether it may be pointed out that no foresight could have guarded against it.

This calamity was intensified by the severity of the cold and by the bitter winds which blew constantly. On the 25th of this discovery Scott wrote: "The rapid advance of the weather is ominous. It is a race between the season and hard conditions and our own strength and good food."

John Wesley and Norwich. John Wesley would probably have proclaimed the disastrous floods at Norwich to be a Divine judgment upon the inhabitants, who he cordially detested. His "Journal" is full of lamentations at the "perverseness" and "recklessness" of the people. When he preached there in 1709 "the congregation was rude and noisy." In 1761 he preached at the Cathedral, but "Bedlam broke out among the hearers." He found "no people in the England or Ireland" to be saved from a religious point of view by reason of their "unstable character" and "marvellous ignorance." Wesley did not think the Norwich men improved upon acquaintance, and in 1788 he declared the citizens to be "the most selfish and yet the most stubborn" he had ever met.

There was a rug, tack it securely to a bare, clean floor; next scrub with ammonia water and pure castile soapsuds; rinse thoroughly and leave tacked to the floor until perfectly dry.

MORE LIGHT ON CAPT. SCOTT'S HEROIC DEATH

poor Soldier (Oates) nearly done for. It is pathetic enough because we can do nothing for him; more food might do a little, but only a little, I fear. We none of us expected these terrible low temperatures, and of the rest of us Wilson is feeling them most; mainly I fear from his self-sacrificing devotion in doctoring the party.

"I have been so tired that I have been unable to sleep for long hours, and to feel that the progress is so slow. One can only say, 'God help us,' and plod on our weary way, cold and wet, and exhausted, though outwardly cheerful."

On March 7 Oates' feet gave intense pain, but he showed "wonderful pluck," we still talk of what we will do together at home," and the normal and the entry closes with: "I should like to keep the track to the end." On the 10th he has been placed under most kind care. He has never given up and he has never given up. He has never given up. He has never given up.

ROLAND MOFFATT SUES W. S. MONTGOMERY FOR A LARGE AMOUNT IN MONTREAL COURT

Montreal, Dec. 5.—That George Moffatt is insane and that he suffers from the most horrible hallucinations, which recently led him to make an attempt on his life in the Verdun asylum, was testimony given by Doctor Burgess, medical superintendent of the latter institution in the case of Roland Moffatt versus W. S. Montgomery, of Dalhousie, N. B., heard before Judge Lane.

The plaintiff's curator for George Moffatt, and alleged that the latter, on January 5, 1912, entered into an agreement with the Montreal General Contracting Company, Limited, by which he lent them $25,000 on a promissory note, which was made payable on February 27, 1912, at 6 per cent, and which was secured by a chattel mortgage on certain property and effects, and also by three mortgages on tugs and barges.

On March 21, 1912, the note was still unpaid, and George Moffatt assigned and transferred the same to a promissory note for $25,000, for $1 and other considerations.

The plaintiff contends that no good or valuable consideration was ever received by George Moffatt, and that the latter was "non compos mentis" at the time he made the agreement, and that it was through undue influence that Montgomery received the transfer. Consequently he asks that the contract be declared null and void.

The plaintiff contends that George Moffatt made to the defendant, a donation of bonds of the Province of New Brunswick amounting to $10,000, and that he lent him a release on a promissory note for $25,000, a loan made by Moffatt to the defendant.

Doctor Burgess, assistant medical superintendent of Verdun corroborated the statements of the defendant, and added that he believed the symptoms of insanity displayed by George Moffatt were such as to give little hope for his recovery.

SUDDEN DEATH OF YORK CO. WOMAN

Mrs. William Hughes Fatally Stricken Saturday Night—New Judicature Act in Effect Dec. 10.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 6.—Federal as well as state authorities are likely to take a hand in the investigation of the poison needle mystery growing out of the experience of Mrs. Marjorie Graf in a moving picture theatre two days ago.

So far the only arrest that is the young South American, Armand Megaro, who is held in $20,000 bail on an assault charge made by Mrs. Graf after a man leaped near her in a box jabbled a needle into her arm and she was seized with drowsiness. The cases of five young women reported to have been victims of experience similar to those of Mrs. Graf are being investigated by the police of this city, however, and the attention of the federal authorities here has been brought to the Graf case in connection with their inquiry into several white slave cases.

United States District Attorney Charles F. Lynch said today that the government authorities would not if it was shown that a "needle game" was operating between this state and New York. Sociological workers, here and in New York city, have laid emphasis on the Graf case in their public warning regarding methods of white slavers in procuring girls. They pointed out that hypodermic needles may be bought for five cents each, and that druggists have no trouble in purchasing drugs also.

The police here are at present withholding the names of all the reported victims except Miss Jennette Clark, 19 years old, who said today she had been attacked in the way Mrs. Graf was and in the same theatre on Thanksgiving night. Miss Clark would not identify Megaro as her assailant.
