THE OLD STUFF.

My son, when you go to a vodvyle show. You'll notice that people will shrink. At jokes they have heard since the long, long ago.

And heard twenty times every week. The moral is plain if you'll read as you run.

A novelty adds to our zest. But when it comes down to extracting the "moo."

The old stuff gets over the best.

It may be all right when you're courting a dame.

To talk about them and such; But, take it from me—if you'd win at the game.

You won't stick to them so much. You'll tell her that she's of a beautiful mold.

A stunner becomingly dressed. You'll tell her that she's of a beautiful mold.

The old stuff gets over the best.

In politics, business, society, art. However the world has progressed, it still remains true to the words I impart.

"The old stuff gets over the best."—Exchange.

A Gun in the Hand.

"Yes, sir, with this weapon you are absolutely invincible."

"Very well, then, hand over your cash."—Felix Mele.
