

This is the actress of well known name. She has travelled the country from Chiel to Galt. Like many a lady of footlight fame, she writes "to keep healthy take Abbey's Salt."

PEOPLE WHO TRAVEL suffer much from different conditions of food and drink. Abbey's will keep the bowels well regulated so that you may eat and drink with impunity. ABBEY'S SALT will be found in the "grip" of almost every traveller. It banishes the effects of a convivial evening. Cures indigestion. Gives a bright eye and a clear head.

AT THE LEGISLATURE.

As there are some other sections to be added to this bill I will move that progress be reported with leave to sit again. This was done.

The bill for the encouragement of the manufacture of railway cars was then considered.

HON. MR. PUGSEY said he would move that progress be reported. There was a difference of opinion in regard to this bill and the Government did not desire to press it. Progress was reported.

EMPLOYERS LIABILITY.

The House went into committee on the bill respecting the liability of employers for injuries to workmen.

HON. MR. PUGSEY said that while this bill had been carefully framed they did not expect to satisfy everyone. As an evidence of this he had received a telegram from the Trades and Labor Council saying that they would not accept this bill on the ground that no class of laborers should be excluded from it and that no law would be acceptable that did not embrace the ideas in the New Zealand Act.

He was not wedded to that Act. He thought it went too far and there was no reason in demanding that this bill should include every class of laborers. The Government was not prepared at present to go to that extent, nor did he think that the public demanded it. They had gone to what they considered a reasonable extent and he thought they ought to move carefully in this legislation. The Government did not propose to delay the passage of this measure because the Trade and Labor Council did not accept it. He was satisfied that the great mass of the working people would be benefited by it.

MR. HAZEN said that he had received a similar telegram to that of the Attorney General. It was quite evident that the people at whose instance the bill was introduced do not approve of the act, but condemn it. Prior to last session a deputation waited on the Government and a compensation bill was introduced last session. As a result of this, the matter stood over and now we have another bill that the working men say will be no advantage to them. That being the case it would not be regarded as unfair if the Government withdrew the bill. The present bill is undoubtedly an advance on the common law in making a foreman and superintendent fix the liability of his employees. He noticed that while the bill made the employer responsible for an accident occurring in consequence of the conduct of the man at the wheel in loading a steamship, there was no provision for a similar accident in a quarry. The whole gist of the matter turned on the question put by the member for St. John, as to whether an employer would be liable for an accident due to the carelessness of a man on the scow placing the deals improperly in the sling. The Attorney General said he would not be.

HON. MR. PUGSEY said he was afraid he had been misunderstood. He thought that the man in the scow would not be in the same employment as the man at the wheel, and therefore the stevedore would not be liable. But if there were in the same employment the stevedore would be liable. If there was any doubt on that subject he would have the bill amended so as to make the liability clear.

MR. HAZEN said that he thought that the amount for compensation is not large enough. The bill makes it $1,500, while the New Zealand Act makes it $2,500.

HON. MR. PUGSEY said it is not limited to $1,500, but to three years' wages, if they exceed $1,500. If the accident arises from the carelessness of the employer, the laborer does not need this Act, but can resort to his common law remedy, where there is no limit as to damages.

MR. HAZEN said New Zealand, Belgium and France the laws go further than in England and he was informed that their effect had not been unfavorable to the interests of the country. The workers further asked for a board of arbitrators, as in the New Zealand Act. They want some cheap tribunal that a court of law.

MR. HAZEN said that he thought that there ought to be a fixed amount per week as compensation for injuries. They object to a court from which the decisions can be appealed and which would be ruinous to poor men. They also suggest that the defence of common employment should only avail when there is not only a common employment but a common employer. There is a feeling in this country that as labor is the basis of its prosperity the social status of the laborers should be recognized, and

A LETTER FROM STE CROIX.

Dr. Ed. Morin's Cardinal Pills
ARE UNRIVALLED.

Mrs. Adolphe Legendre Cured of Great Stomach Weakness by Their Extraordinary Influence.

To DR. ED. MORIN, Quebec:

I think I cannot award too much praise to the magnificent preparation, which saved my life.

DR. ED. MORIN'S CARDINAL PILLS.

A bad attack of grippe had left me on a state of great weakness. I thought at first that time would restore my lost strength, but such was not the case. On the contrary, I was going from bad to worse. I was unable to do any thing; the little that I eat was digested only with difficulty and I got no sleep.

I was discouraged and unceremonious by my unfortunate condition. I had taken several tonics without effect. One day I felt myself sinking, I resolved to try

DR. ED. MORIN'S CARDINAL PILLS

The effects of the first box taken were not of a nature to give me much encouragement. Nevertheless I used a second box, which did me great good. After a use of several months, I was perfectly cured and my old time health restored.

I am now strong and healthy, eating and digesting as well as might be.

MRS. ADOLPHE LEGENDRE.

STE CROIX, JANUARY, 1900.

The Day of Destiny

Continued.

"How could she help it?" repeated Mrs. Tibbett. "She hadn't seen you and heard you talk as you've done to me," she added, naively. "And she believed it!" murmured Cyril. "She!"

Then he caught up his hat, but put it down again, and strode to and fro uncertainly.

"And Lord Beaumont—did he believe that I had run away with this girl?"

"Mrs. Tibbett shook her head sadly. "How could he do otherwise? They say he quarrelled with Mr. Dyer about it, standing up for you through thick and thin, until old Marsden came with the letter from the girl."

"So, so!" said Cyril. "And he believed it! Truly a man may live amongst you for months, and gain no hold upon your trust!"

Then he took up his hat. "Stop and have something to eat," Mr. Cyril, pleaded Mrs. Tibbett, "you look so pale and tired."

"I am going to the Abbey at once," said Cyril.

"It's of no use—not yet, at least," said Mrs. Tibbett, who had not told him all the truth, and was afraid to. "I am going to the Abbey," said Cyril, sternly, and walked out of the house.

He noticed, absentmindedly, that the people he passed stared at him, even his own laborer; and one or two muttered faintly Marsden's name at a safe distance, but they did not trouble Cyril—all his thoughts were of Leola.

Full of grief and bitterness of soul he strode on with downcast head. He could have borne all and smiled at everything if she had been true and staunch.

But that she should have believed the tissue of lies which had been so ingeniously weaved, struck him to the heart.

He felt, besides, bewildered by the tangled web which had clung round him and impeded his progress.

There had been deceit and forgery somewhere. Who was the prime mover in the plot?

Who else could it be but Philip Dyer?

But these were but secondary thoughts—Leola stood first. He walked up to the terrace—one of the servants, a coachman, passed him, but instead of touching his hat took not the slightest notice and rang the bell.

The porter opened it and nodded grimly at the sight of Cyril.

The man did not look surprised by the news of Cyril's return had spread through the village, and been carried to the Abbey long before this.

"Good morning, Simmonds," said Cyril, about to turn into the hall.

But Simmonds stepped in front of him.

"Beg pardon, Mr. Kingsley," he said, "but the owners are not to admit you to the Abbey."

"Indeed!" said Cyril, turning white, but biting his lips to keep himself calm. "May I ask who gave you that order, Simmonds?"

"The mistress herself, Mr. Kingsley," said the man, grimly.

"Is Miss Dale at home?" said Cyril, his lip trembling in spite of himself.

"Yes, she is, but you cannot see her. She's too ill to see anyone at all, and if she saw—"

He paused, but the pause was significant.

"Will Mrs. Wetherell see me?" asked Cyril.

"No, Mr. Kingsley," said the man confidently. "I am sure she will not. She is up with the young mistress."

Cyril turned slightly away to hide the emotion which showed upon his face as he turned his pale face.

"Simmonds," he said, "there has been some foul play."

"Indeed there has, Mr. Kingsley," said Simmonds, grimly.

"Not on my part, although I am credited with it. Simmonds, will you take a message to Miss Dale—or Mrs. Wetherell from me?"

"If you don't mind waiting outside, sir," said Simmonds, gravely. "My orders were strict; you were not to be allowed to see her at all, and now you are here. Cyril could not forbear smiling sadly.

"I will wait outside, Simmonds," he said. "But believe me, the piece would be as safe as if it were in the hall."

"Ah," said Simmonds, solemnly, "it ain't the piece you're going to be running away with, Mr. Kingsley."

"Now," said Cyril, "go in and tell Miss Dale's maid, Mary, to tell her mistress that I am here waiting to see her or Mrs. Wetherell. That is all."

"I'll go, but it's of no use, Mr. King-

Sleeplessness

Is akin to insanity. Many a woman realizes this as she lies awake hour by hour, peeping the darkness with phantoms, starting at the creaking of the bedclothes, or the rustle of the bedclothes.

Such symptoms in general point to disease of the delicate womanly organs, and a constant drain of the vital and nervous forces.

This condition cannot be overcome by sleeping powders. The diseased condition must be cured before the consequences of disease are removed.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the womanly diseases which cause nervousness and sleeplessness. It is the best of tonics and invigorants, nourishing the nerves, encouraging the appetite and inducing refreshing sleep. Irregularity, weakening drains, inflammation, ulceration and female weakness are perfectly cured by "Favorite Prescription."

"My wife was sick for over eight years," writes Albert H. Fuller, Esq., of Alton, Grundy County, Iowa. "She had various diseases and was treated by two physicians and got no relief. At last I read of Dr. Pierce's medicine and we decided to try his Favorite Prescription. I sent to the drug store and bought a bottle and the first dose gave ease and sleep. She had not slept for three nights. Before this it would cure her. I sent for a second bottle and when she had taken the sixth bottle she was sound and well."

Mrs. Wetherell, as you may be aware, "I am aware, and I am, I must say, astonished at your want of taste," said Philip Dyer, shrugging his shoulders.

"Considering that your little escapade is known all over the place, and that it must have reached Miss Dale's—your mistress's—ears, I must say I should have expected better taste from you than to endeavor to force your presence upon her."
