

Hoop personnel Rookie Profiles

CARL THOMAS

Carl comes to Dal from Port-of-Spain, Trinidad. He has a great wealth of raw ability. Especially proficient in rebounding, this man can jump "sky high". Carl may not see too much action this year as he needs a lot of experience. However, he will be an important cog in Dal basketball in the future. This pre-med student captained his high school team in Port of Spain and won several trophies as an outstanding athlete.

PETER F. LACAS

Even while in Q.E.G.S., Peter was known for his drive, desire, and hustle. Without a doubt he has lived up to his reputation. "Foggy", as he is affectionately known, plays a very determined defense. Like Carl, "Foggy" needs a little experience and polish to fully develop his potential. However, he played well in the exhibition game against the Schooners, and should see some action this year.

Kumi Here Next Friday

S.T.O. Kumi, High Commissioner of Ghana, addresses Dalhousie students December 5th, marking the African Freedom Day Celebrations.

The Dalhousie African Students Association, according to publicity officer Solly Essop, will fly Mr. Kumi to Dal from Ottawa for the event.

Don MacLean, Dalhousie Public Relations, will then launch a fund raising campaign for an Angola Refugee Camp in the Congo. The Camp is run by a Dr. Gilchrist, a graduate of Dalhousie, said Essop.

Essop continued that after the speeches there would be entertainment and refreshments. He said cost per student was 50¢.

Mr. Essop said that the party would feature South African jazz, called 'Quealla,' Basutoland Dances and International music.

He said the meeting would end after a Ghanaian Floor Show.

Four Virgins

Helen of Troy had it. Venus had it, with or without arms.

Sue Wallace, Gen. Arts I, has it too according to a letter from the "Dalhousie Gazette" received at our Gazette office on Tuesday.

Dear Sir,
The Dalhousie Gazette will double any reasonable bid for Sue Wallace (Share Slave Auction, Nov. 6, 1964.)

Further, we will include 3,000 newspaper subscriptions, seven typewriters, two filing cabinets, six grease pencils, and four virgins.

She commented in Sphinx-like riddles.

"It's very flattering," she said "but I'm sure I could get a higher valuation from Jacobi in view of my high IQ which I value above my looks."

"Besides," she continued, "what's the market rate on virgins."

Asked if she would be willing to go to Dalhousie, she replied, Homerically, "I fear Greeks, even when bearing gifts."

Engineers Hold 1-Point Margin Over Science

By HUNTZ STANTAFORD
Highly-rated Meds team downed Science 8-2 in a game played on Tuesday, Nov. 17. It was the first loss of the season for the science team as they were completely out-played by the Doctors.

The Meds stars were Frank Sim, Dave Knickle and Tom Scantlebury, who scored 3, 3, and 2 goals respectively. Sim has been the main scoring star for the Med team, so far this season he is leading in the league scoring race with eleven goals. The Science goals were scored by Mike Shaughnessey, and King.

On Wednesday, Law downed Dent 5-2 in a hard fought game. Law were stronger in all round play and their goals came from Carruthers (2), Al Hayman, Gary Hurst and Ted Margeson. Jamie Levitz and Rollis Canning put up a good show for the Dents as they each scored one goal.

Three games were played on Sunday afternoon and two were won by decisive and high scores. The league leading Engineers walked over Arts 9-3. Once again a main reason for the Arts loss was their poor turn out of players. Mal Murray was the hero for the Engineers as he led the team with four goals. His line-mate, Wolfe scored three and the other two goals were from Williamson and Gouldthorne. The two Arts goals were scored by John Tilley and Bethune.

In the second game of the afternoon Pharm. & Ed. defeated Commerce 6-3 in a lopsided game. The only bright light for Commerce was John Napier who scored all three of their goals. Pharm. & Ed. goals were netted by Yvon Landry (2), Ron Richards, Browne, Chan, and Betik.

The other game of the afternoon was between Science and Pharm. & Ed. The game was closely fought between the two fairly strong teams and Science ended up having more luck around the goal and wound up on the long end of a 3-1 score. MacDonald led Science, scoring two important goals and the insurance marker was fired by Knight. Pharm & Ed.'s only goal was scored by Jerry Betik.

Frank Sim of Med still leads the league in scoring with 11 goals and the next best man is Mal Murray of Engineers with 7. There is a four way tie for third place between Paul Clarke (Sc), Landry (Ph&Ed), Dave Murray (Med) and Dave Knickle (Med) who all have 4 goals.

In the standings, Engineers are in first place with 6 points, Science a close second with 5, while Meds, Law, and Pharm. & Ed. all have 4.

Here is good news for typists, says The Financial Post. All good men need not now come to the aid of the party and the quick brown fox need jump over the lazy dog no longer. The reason: A U.S. firm has just produced a typebook containing far zippiet sentences for making sure practicing typists use every letter of the keyboard. "Graft kid, 43, vows miss quit cozy zylophone job," might be a cinch after a lot of practice. So might these examples: "Wet squid's inky haze veils sex of jumping crab". "Squeaking rival jezebels ex-hume cryptic wolf". "Exiled z-aube packs barque with jolly frogmen". Or even this: "Doxy with charming buzz quaffs 12 vodka juleps".

These may or may not speed up typing or otherwise improve knowledge of the alphabet, comments The Financial Post, but they have the merit of being entertaining.
