

Airport adequate until 2000: 1970 report

The original 1970 report prepared by federal planners on the feasibility of a second airport in Toronto found that International Airport in Mississauga could serve air traffic needs until the year 2000.

The revelation came this week when the federal Transport Minister released more than 200 documents to the People or Planes Committee opposing the chosen Pickering site.

The government Toronto Airport Planning Team found that no additional land acquisition or increase in aircraft noise would result from expansion to 2000. The saving of $2 billion would make the Malton expansion "preferable" the planners said.

"Analysis of another criterion, air operations and control indicates that Malton as the single major airport in the region would be substantially better than a two-airport system," the report concluded.

The planning team's recommendations were not followed up when Transport Minister Donald Jamieson hired an independent planning consultant who questioned the results.

Hans Blumenfeld of Toronto said the federal planners had underestimated social costs of the expansion of Malton.

A March 1972 report by the Canadian Air Transportation Administration concluded with the present government argument that "the potential additional capacity (at Malton) is expected to be modest and would be insufficient to handle forecast traffic beyond the late 1970's."

Peel Gallery art exhibition

An exhibition of paintings by former Scarborough artist, Harold Rayner will open Wednesday, Aug. 16 in the Peel County Museum and Art Gallery.

Rayner has been visiting Jamaica and other Caribbean islands, including St. Kitts, Montserrat, Antigua, Dominica, St. Lucia and Barbados, ever since his love affair with this part of the world began back in 1962.

His present collection of paintings are expressions of the exceptional rapport that he has established not only with the people of the islands, but also with the dramatic and exotic landscape of these islands.

Instead of the usual opening ceremony, there will be a "Meet the Artist" evening Thursday, Sept. 7 from 8 to 9 when Rayner will be present to meet both gallery members and the general public.

Rayner is the brother of well-known Peel County artist and illustrator Gordon Rayner of Brampton.

In honour of the visit to Brampton of the Duke and Duchess of Argyll, there will be a small exhibit illustrating the history of the Scottish clans and their tartans.

County of Peel Museum and Art Gallery is located at 7 Wellington St., Brampton, and is open to the public Wednesday through Sunday, 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Tours by appointment 451-9051.
