

manifest his will in regard to his baptism, he entreated the Giver of Life and Death to restore life to the child: "May it please Thee, O God, to give life to this infant that it may be a sign of my vocation to Thy Son's fold." Hardly had the young man ceased, when the child sprang up alive from the bier. Helier, taking this as an evident sign of God's will, craved and received baptism from the Bishop's hands.

