Just a few weeks more and the busy, prosperous horse buyers will be searching the country again. And these buyers will know a good horse when they see one, be sure of that. So it will be a wise move on your part, Mr. Farmer, to take the chances offered by the present slack time, and if there are any finished horses in your stable, there are, get busy at once—now's your time to clean and cure them up—ready for the buyer's keen examination. By doing so, you're likely to save yourself a lot of money. Forty or fifty dollars, even, have more than once been lost to farmers, because of a bluish or diseased animal they've tried to sell. Many of the most successful horse breeders use "Achloro" by "Absorbent"—relying on it to remove all blemishes.

A Valuable Book for Farmers and Poultrymen, Free

A 24-page book called "Practical Farm Buildings" has just been published by F. W. Bird & Son, East Wallingford, Mass., and Chicago. It is full of valuable plans and specifications for all kinds of farm and poultry buildings, and every one of our readers should take advantage of the exceptional offer they are making to send it free to anyone who sends in a cent in stamps to pay for postage. The book would ordinarily sell for $1, and it is worth every cent of it.

The first few pages describe the best location, shape, etc., for poultry buildings, and a dozen or more pages are given up to plans and specifications of the latest and most practical types of poultry and colony houses. Twenty pages are given up to dairy farms, stables, hog houses, sheep sheds, and other buildings on the farm.

This is one of the most valuable pieces of advertising matter ever put out and only a half dozen pages in the rear of the book are reserved for the story about Paroid and Neponset Rooms. On these pages may be found cuts of the Plant Industry Building at Washington, Colony and Chicken Houses on the farm of Prof. C. M. Cowell, of the Maine Experiment Station at Orono, Maine, the Largest goose farm in Minnesota, buildings on the street duck farm in the world, and a eye view of W. Barry Owen's plant at Vineyard Haven, Mass., and of D. J. Lambert, Ayrton, N.H., and many other buildings owned by leading poultrymen.

Our readers should send for this book at once, because the edition is limited and it will also pay you to get samples of Paroid and Neponset if you do not know about the kind of work they will do. Kindly mention THE FARMING WORLD when writing.
